THE NEW CONSTITUTION OF INDIA

With a Foreword by Mashir Bahadur Dr. P. BASU M. A., Ph. D., B. L.
Principal, Holkar College, Indore,
and
Vice-Chancellor, Agra University.

"This study of the Act for the general reader has been considerably simplified by the present brochure. Professor Aiyar has carefully analysed the provisions of the Act bringing out its main features. His explanations are lucid and his grasp of the subject thorough. It is not easy to show all this within two hundred and fifty pages. This is his credit as also the special merit of this book. I have no hesitation in recommending it to all who want clearly to understand the fundamental points of the new constitution and I hope that this book will be widely read by the educated public of India."

NOV 6 1978 (Extract from the Foreword).

FOREWORD.

The common complaint of the layman is that constitutions and the measures that embody them are set out in a language that remains highly technical. Consequently though every one is governed by the Law laying down the Constitution, a very small percentage of the people understand it. That is not a desirable state of affairs; but it exists.

It is there lies the usefulness of books like the one written by Mr. V. R. S. Aiyer. They help the average educated man to understand the law to which he is subject every day of his life and, perhaps imperceptibly enable him to model his life in full understanding of the provisions of the law. Mr. Aiyer's additional object is to make the Government of India Act (1935) intelligible to the student. Both by his intimate contact with the student world and his past experience Mr. Aiyer is fully qualified for catering to the needs of that class, anxious to understand complicated legal enactments; and his book is a valuable contribution in that direction and presents a complete summary of the Act with sufficient legal accuracy.

Mr. Aiyer has quite rightly not expressed any views regarding the merits of the constitution that is set out in the Government of India Act (1935). The Constitution has yet to come into force and diverse opinions are held about its several details. How the Great Experiment is going to take shape will depend on a large variety of considerations that are independent of the letter of the Constitution. Dealing with the prospects of success of the constitution might have created confusion in the mind of the student and hindered, rather than helped towards the realisation of the object of the author, viz., enabling the young mind to get a clear grasp of the implications of the various provisions of the Government of India Act.

PREFACE.

This book is modelled to meet the requirements of the general public who desire to have an idea of the new Constitution of India, and of College students who have got to study the Government of India Act of 1935 as a part of their course. In the earlier chapters an idea of a Federal Constitution and a survey of the history of the Indian Constitution up to 1935 are given. A summary of the Act and of the Schedules thereto is then given. The last five chapters contain a reprint of important Sections of the Act; and notes are given for several of them. In the Appendices the trends of development of the Administrative machinery, civil and military, are dealt with.

I have inserted in appropriate places some extracts from the series of my articles on the "States and Federation" and on the "Public Services." I have also embodied in this book practically all the chapters of my book, "The New Constitution of India," which was intended mainly for Law students.

I am obliged to Mr. W. Y. Pande M. A., LL. B., of the Indore Bar, who drafted the summary of about forty sections of the Act, and to my brother, Mr. V. R. Sadashivan M. A., who prepared the Index and helped me considerably in seeing the book through the Press.

I am deeply obliged to Wazir-ud-Daulah Rai Bahadur Sir S. M. Bapna Kt., C. I. E., B. A., B. Sc., LL. B., for writing the Foreword.

I am thankful to the Government of India for the permission granted to reprint important Sections of the Act.

My thanks are also due to my brother co-operators Prof. W. G. Urdhwareshe M. A., F. R. E. S. and Mr. D. R. Ektare B. A. in charge of the Indore Co-operative Printing Press for help rendered in connection with the publication.

Indore, January, 1937.

“ It is axiomatic that the spirit in which a constitution is worked must in the long run count for more than the letter in which it is written. For myself I am able to assure you that, for such time as I am holding my present office, it is my intention to interpret my duty with liberal and sympathetic mind.....For my part I shall be found ready and anxious, when the time comes, to work to the best of my power with any and every political party willing to work the constitution that may succeed in winning the confidence of the electorates.”— His Excellency The Marquis of LINLITHGOW.

“ The political evolution of India has reached a point where in their respective spheres the Governor-General and Governors of Provinces should more and more seek to observe those conventions which regulate the attitude towards matters of contemporary public controversy, of the Crown in Great Britain and of the representatives of the Crown in, for example, Canada and Australia, for, democratic institutions require for their successful working that all parties in the State which, whether in office or in opposition work within the Constitution, should be able to feel that at the head of the State there is some one above party and above the heat and the dust of party warfare to whom they can at all times and whatever their political fortunes for the time being look with confidence for all proper countenance and support.” — His Excellency The Marquis of LINLITHGOW.

THE INDIAN CONSTITUTION

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTORY EXPLANATIONS.

The Constitution:—A State is defined by Maclver as “an association, which, acting through law as promulgated by government endowed to this end with coercive power, maintains within a community, territorially demarcated, the universal external conditions of social order”. Constitutional law is the body of principles which determine the essential and fundamental portions of the State’s organisation. “The Constitution of a State consists of those of its laws or rules which determine the form of its government and the respective rights and duties of it towards the citizens and of the citizens towards the government.” (Bryce)

Composite States:— States are variously classified according to different principles. Under one such principle, States are either unitary or composite. Composite states involve the union under a government of a number of political entities retaining separate administrations. “In the form of empire, the components do not create the common government. In the form of federation, the components both retain a degree of sovereignty and together constitute the sovereign power, which upholds the federal union.” (Salmond). It has to be noted that “so long as the sub-divisions in a state are really nothing but historical or administrative circumscriptions without an extensive local autonomy of right, the state is simple in form, not federal."

Unions:—Unions are of various kinds. They may be personal unions, where two or more states, wholly separate and distinct in their external and internal relations, are associated under the same reigning sovereign. The only bond of union is the Crown eg. between England and Hanover between 1714 and 1837. A real union results from the joining together of two or more states, not merely through the common ruler "but through the creation of common constitutional or international arrangements for the administration of common affairs." Hall says that "such a union occurs when states are indissolubly combined under the same monarch, their identity being merged in that of a common state for external purposes, eg. old Austria-Hungary, Norway and Sweden from 1815 to 1905."

Confederations:—There are leagues or unions of states which seem to fall somewhere between mere alliance and federation. They differ from alliance in having a form of common government, so that they act through a single recognised authority in matters affecting the whole body mainly in respect of external relations. They differ from federations in that this common government deals only with the constituent states and not directly with their individual citizens. The old American Confederation was of this type. Willoughby states the distinction thus in his "Fundamental Concepts of Public Law":—"In the federal state, a true central state is created, its several units are legally and constitutionally united, and sovereignty resides in the central federal body. In the Confederacy, the individual states retain their character as States, and the relations to each other are of an international or treaty character. Consequently no central state is created, and sovereignty lies wholly within such individual political units. What union there is in the confederacy is the creation of the wills of individual states. In the Federal State its foundation rests in itself."

Federations:—"The name federal government may be applied to any union of component members where the degree of union between the members surpasses that of mere alliance, however intimate, and where the degree of independence possessed by each member surpasses anything which can come under the head of mere municipal freedom." (Freeman). Federation is often a device invented by constitutionalists for the proper governance of unwieldy areas. Sidgwick points out that the maintenance of the federal system in the United States of America may be partly attributed to a sense of the difficulty of governing the vast territory by the methods of a unitary state. The two essentials for the formation of a federation are a desire for union but not for unity, and some common interests such as language, racial affinities, culture, civilisation, traditions, &c. The characteristics of a federation are the supremacy of the Constitution (with its attendant consequences that the constitution must be written as embodying the terms of a solemn contract, that the constitution must be rigid, and that the legislature in a federation is a non-sovereign law-making body), the separation of powers, and the authority of courts. It is also pointed out by Dicey that when compared to a Unitary constitution, federal government is weak, that the constitution leads to conservatism (being like a slumbering monarch hard to rouse), that it leads to the predominance of the judiciary and that litigation is substituted for legislation. It is, however, pointed out by Munro in his book " United States of America," that for internal efficiency federal government is as good as any other form; the weakness, if any, will be only if the foreign policy of the federation is aggressive with a view to getting the benefit of territorial aggrandisement.

The American Constitution:—For noting the analogous conditions in other federations, a few points may be mentioned. The central legislative power in the United States of America is vested in the President and the Congress, which consists of two Houses, the Senate and the House of Representatives. The Senate is composed of two representatives from each State chosen for six years. The Vice-President of the United States is the President of the Senate. For the President, its consent is necessary in the appointment to public offices and the conduct of foreign affairs. The House of Representatives is composed of members elected for two years by various States in proportion to the size of their population. The assent of both Houses is required for any measure. If the President dissents, the measure is returned to the House which initiated it, and if it is again passed by a majority of two-thirds in both Houses, it becomes law. The Supreme Court has power to try all cases arising under the Constitution, each individual State having also a separate Court with exclusive jurisdiction in matters not involving the interpretation of federal statutes. Amendments to the Constitution may be proposed by the Congress with the approval of two-thirds of both Houses, or by a convention summoned on the application of two-thirds of State legislatures. The proposed amendments must be subsequently ratified by at least three-fourths of the State legislatures. Powers not delegated to the centre, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States. The central executive is vested in a President, who is elected together with the Vice-President for four years.

The Swiss Constitution :—In Switzerland, side by side with a federal government, the legislative powers of which are strictly defined, there exist the local legislatures of the various Cantons with undefined legislative powers. The Federal Government consists of (1) a Federal Executive Council composed of seven members, elected by both Houses of the legislature sitting together in Congress, for three years. (2) a Federal Legislature consisting of two Houses, viz., the Council of States, composed of two members elected from each of the cantons, and the National Council composed of members elected for three years by the people in each canton in proportion to their population. The members of the Federal Executive Council may introduce a measure or speak in either House but they cannot vote. The President and the Vice-President are nominated annually by the Legislature. The Federal Council has certain Judicial powers in deciding questions of constitutional and administrative law. They are not dismissable by the legislature. The Judiciary is composed of nineteen members chosen by the legislature for six years. It has no power to decide the validity of laws passed by the federal legislature or to decide cases of administrative law. No alteration of the constitution can be effected without resorting to referendum.

The Australian Constitution:—The Australian Commonwealth exhibits the following characteristics: — (1) a Federal form of Government, (2) a Parliamentary Executive; (3) an effective method for amending the Constitution. The powers of the federal government, both executive and legislative, are, though wide, definite and limited; the powers of the separate States are indefinite, so that any power not assigned by the Constitution to the Federal Government remains vested in each of the several States. The House of Representatives represents numbers; the Senate represents the States of the Commonwealth; and each of the Original States is entitled, irrespective of its size and population, to an equal number of senators. The courts and ultimately the Federal Supreme Court, are intended to be the interpreters, and in this sense the protectors of the Constitution. The Executive of the Commonwealth is a Parliamentary Cabinet. A law changing the Constitution must be passed by an absolute majority of each House of Parliament; it must then be submitted to the electors of the Commonwealth; if in a majority of the States, a majority of the electors voting approve the law, and a majority of all the electors voting approve the law, then it will duly become law according to the usual procedure. (Dicey.)

If the constitution can be altered by the same process and body by which ordinary laws are passed, then the constitution is said to be flexible; otherwise it is rigid. Under "administrative law" as distinguished from the 'Rule of Law' prevalent in England, tribunals separate and distinct from the ordinary courts of justice, and constituted on different principles, are provided for the adjudication of disputes between private individuals and public authorities, and of disputes among administrative officials themselves.

CHAPTER II

HISTORICAL SURVEY.

Introductory:—It is customary, to divide the Constitutional History of Modern India into certain well-marked periods, viz. (1) from 1600 to 1765—the period of charters to the East India Company, (2) from 1765 to 1857—the period of territorial sovereignty of the Company, (3) from 1858 to 1919—the period of sovereign Government by the Crown, and (4) the period of Responsible Government from 1919.

The period of Charters:—During the first of these periods, thirteen charters were granted. Among other conditions, it was provided that the laws made by the Company were to be “reasonable and not contrary to the laws, statutes and customs of the English realm.”

The Second period:—The period of territorial sovereignty of the Company commences with the grant of the Diwani to the Company by the Moghul Emperor in 1765. The Regulating Act of 1773 “definitely recognised the political functions of the Company, but asserted for the first time the right of Parliament to dictate the form of Government for the Company’s possessions.” It created a Governor-General of Bengal in Council in Calcutta, with power of control over Madras and Bombay, and with legislative authority to promulgate Ordinances and Regulations. A Supreme Court was constituted in Bengal and a Court of Directors in England. The Act of 1781 rectified some of the defects of the Regulating Act by settling the question relating to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, and by exempting the public servants of the Company from the jurisdiction of the Court for acts done in their official capacity. The court was to administer the personal law of the defendant, and to respect the religious customs of people. The Act of 1784 placed the Government in India under the Board of Control in England. The Act of 1793 contained the official declaration of the disavowal of a policy of extension and expansion of territories. The Act of 1800 created a Supreme Court at Madras. The Act 1807 conferred some legislative powers on the Governors in Council at Bombay and Madras. The Act of 1813 empowered the local governments to impose taxes on persons subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts. The Act of 1835, while permitting the immigration of Europeans, empowered the Governor-General in Council to provide for "the protection of the natives from insults and outrages in their religions and opinions." Equality of opportunity for the admission of qualified Indians to the Public Service was enunciated. A Law Member was added as an extra-ordinary member of the Council of the Governor-General of India. His function was to help in making laws and Regulations. The legislative powers of the Governors of Madras and Bombay were taken away. The Indian Law Commission was constituted. The Act of 1853 made the Law Member an ordinary Member of the Governor-General's Council with power to sit and vote on all matters like other members. The Executive council was expanded for legislative purposes by the appointment of six more persons as additional members for legislation; each of the local Governments of Madras, Bombay, Agra, and Bengal, had to send one official representative; the other two were the Chief Justice and a Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court at Calcutta. The proceedings of the Legislative council were held in public and were published from time to time. The Act of 1854 laid down the "mode of passing Letters Patent and other Acts by the Crown relating to India."

Period of Sovereign Government by the Crown:— The Act of 1858 transferred the Government from the Company to the Crown and created the Secretary of State and the Council of India. The East India Company however wrote:—"Let Her Majesty appreciate the gift; let Her take the vast country and the teeming millions of India under her direct control; but let her not forget the great corporation from whom she has received them, nor the lessons to be learnt from its success." Her Majesty's Proclamation expressed the earnest desire "to administer the Government for the benefit of all our subjects resident therein." The following extracts from that Magna Carta of India are noteworthy:—"We desire no extension of our territorial possessions. We shall respect the rights, dignity, and honour of native Princes as our own. It is our further will, that, so far as may be, our subjects of whatever race or creed, be freely and impartially admitted to office in our service". (See Appendix F)

The Indian Councils Act of 1861 was passed because the Legislative Council created by the Act of 1853 converted itself into an Anglo-Indian House of Commons. The new Act enlarged the Executive Council of the Governor-General by adding a gentleman of the legal profession, a jurist rather than a technical lawyer. The Legislative Council was to consist of not less than six and not more than twelve additional members, of whom at least one-half should be non-official members. Madras and Bombay got back their legislative powers; but the assent of the Governor-General was required for the Provincial Acts. The Legislatures were merely advisory bodies.

The High Courts Act of 1861 empowered the Crown to establish High Courts at Madras, Bombay and Calcutta, with a Chief Justice and not more than 15 judges. In 1866 the Allahabad High Court was created.

The Act of 1892:—The Indian Councils Act of 1892 enlarged the size of the Legislative Councils and the scope of their functions, and changed the method of nomination of members. The Governor-General's Council was to have not less than ten and not more than sixteen members; the Councils at Bombay and Madras were to have not less than 8 and not more than 20; the Bengal Council was to have not more than 20, and the Council for the N. W. Provinces not more than fifteen. The members recommended or elected by certain bodies or territorial groups were to be nominated by the Government. The Councils could discuss the annual Financial statement, without power to vote, and could interpellate Government on matters of public interest.

In August 1907 two Indians were appointed as members of the Council of India. In March 1909 Mr. S. P. Sinha was appointed as Law Member of the Government of India.

The Minto-Morley Reforms:—The Indian Councils Act of 1909 effected improvements in the constitution and functions of the Legislative bodies in India, and introduced the principle of separate electorates. The maximum for the Governor-General's Council was fixed at 60; that for the Punjab and Burma at 30; and for other Provincial Councils at 50. Except the Imperial Legislative Council, all the others had a non-official majority. A large number of non-officials were elected by territorial and other constituencies, while some were nominated also. The non-official members of the Provincial Legislative Council were the general electorate for the Imperial Council, which had also special electorates for land-holders, Muhammadans, and the Bengal and the Bombay Chambers of Commerce. The same system of general and special electorates was followed in the case of the Provincial Councils. The right to discuss and vote on matters of general public interest, to discuss and vote on resolutions relating to the preliminary Financial Statement under items open to discussion, to discuss, but not to vote on, the Budget, to put supplementary questions (restricted to the original interpellator only), constituted the salient features of the Minto-Morley Reforms of 1909. Viscount Morley however said; -- "If I were attempting to set up a Parliamentary system in India, or if it could be said that this chapter of reforms led directly or necessarily to the establishment of a Parliamentary system in India, I, for one, would have nothing at all to do with it." An Indian was appointed as member of the Executive Council of the Governor in each of the Provinces, which had an Executive Council, though this depended on convention and was not made a statutory obligation.

HISTORICAL SURVEY

THE MONTAGU-CHELMSFORD REFORMS.

Genesis:--The auspicious event of the Imperial visit in December, 1911, the creation of the Presidency of Bengal annulling the settled fact of the Partition, the creation of an Executive Council for Bihar and Orissa, the conferment of authority to create Legislative Councils for territories under Chief Commissioners, the creation of a High Court at Patna under the powers conferred by the Indian High Courts Act, 1911, are the points to be noted in the interval before 1919. A variety of circumstances contributed to the introduction of the Montford Reforms of 1919 within ten years of the Minto-Morley Reforms. India's contribution to the prosecution and successful termination of the War was marvellous. Sir M. Visvesvarayya, in his book "Planned Economy for India" says:—"It may be mentioned that in the Great War (1914-18) the total contribution of personnel by India was 1,457,000 men, of whom, 1,381,000 served overseas. This is equivalent to about 25% of the total contributed by Great Britain. The Overseas Dominions sent between them 12% of the same total." "The bare list of donations by Princes fills 200 printed pages. In money, in cars, and in supplies, the aggregate value of these gifts totals many millions." "The casualties on the Indian side amounted to nearly a lakh of soldiers." These and the large contributions from the Indian Exchequer and the Indian public naturally kindled hopes of a substantial recognition. The agitation for reforms was carried on by the Home Rule Leagues. The Congress and the re-organised Moslem League put forward joint proposals known as the Congress-League Scheme embodying the minimum demands of the nation. Nineteen members of the Imperial Legislative Council submitted to the Governor-General the "Nineteen Memorandum" embodying the reforms required. Then came the Mesopotamia Commission and the resignation of Mr. Austen Chamberlain of his post of the Secretary of State for India. On the 20th August, 1917,

HISTORICAL SURVEY

Mr. Montagu, the new Secretary of State, made the historic declaration that “the policy of His Majesty’s Government, with which the Government of India are in complete accord, is that of the increasing association of Indians in every branch of the administration and the gradual development of self-governing institutions with a view to the progressive realisation of responsible government in India as an integral part of the British Empire. The British Government and the Government of India.....must be the judges of the time and measure of each advance”, as progress can only be achieved by successive stages. These and other points were embodied in the Preamble to the Government of India Act of 1919. (Appendix F).

The Secretary of State and the Governor-General toured in India with some other colleagues and drew up their Report on Indian Constitutional Reforms (the 22nd April 1918) which formed the basis for a bill introduced in Parliament. Three Committees viz. the Southborough Committee, the Feetham Committee, and the Crewe Committee submitted their reports on the various Constitutional problems. The Bill, after the usual stages, including consideration by a Joint Select Committee under the chairmanship of Lord Selbourne, was placed on the statute-book as the Government of India Act of 1919.

The Central Government:--The Reforms of 1919 did not introduce any new changes in the Central Executive except that a convention was adopted of appointing three Indians as Members of Governor-General’s Executive Council. Sir John Marriott writes thus in his “English Political Institutions”:-“The changes introduced by that Act (of 1919) into the Supreme Government of India, though considerable, are relatively unimportant. Now, as formerly, executive power is vested in the Viceroy and his Executive Council, who are appointed by the Crown, and are responsible to the Secretary of State in Council and Parliament. The Government, in fact, remains an autocracy tempered by a bicameral Legislature. The right of granting supplies and of legislation is vested ordinarily in the Legislature; but in order to prevent a deadlock between the legislature and the executive, the Viceroy is empowered, when necessary, to override the will of the legislature both in regard to legislation and taxation." The lower House (the Assembly) got the right to elect its own President after the first four years, and to elect the Deputy President from the very beginning. The constitution of standing committees, a substantial elected majority in the Assembly, the right to move adjournments of the House to discuss matters of urgent public importance, and to divide the House for the grant of votable items in the Budget were the other improvements.

Dyarchy:—In the Provinces, the system known as Dyarchy was introduced by which Ministers were placed in charge of transferred subjects like local self-government, public health, education, agriculture &c. The Members of the Executive Council were in charge of reserved subjects like Justice, Finance and Police. Ministers were normally selected from and legally intended to be responsible to, the legislature. A substantial non-official elected majority (not less than 70%) was fixed for the legislature in the Provinces. Practically all the Provinces were brought under a sort of uniform administration prescribed for Governor's Provinces with dyarchy as the feature.

HISTORICAL SURVEY

Miscellaneous:—A Royal Commission was to examine the question of further instalment of Reforms on the expiry of ten years. The salary of the Secretary of State was placed on the British Estimates. The Act also provided that the salary of the Under-Secretaries may be placed on the British Estimates. The number of members of the Council of India was to be not more than twelve and not less than eight. Provision was made for the appointment of a High Commissioner for India in London, an Auditor-General for India and for the establishment of a Public Service Commission. The rules for the Constitution of Provincial Councils and Central legislature received Parliamentary approval in 1920.

(See Appendices A to F for further details).

“ Our conception of the eventual future of India is a sister-hood of States, self-governing in all matters of purely local or provincial interest.....Over this Congeries of States would preside a central government, increasingly representative of and responsible to the people of all of them; dealing with matters, both internal and external, of common interest to the whole of India; acting as arbiter in inter-state relations, and representing the interests of all India on equal terms with the self-governing units of the British Empire. In this picture there is a place also for the Native States ”.

CONSTITUTIONAL INVESTIGATIONS

From 1920 to 1935.

Introductory :—On December 23, 1919, when His Majesty King Emperor George V gave the Royal Assent to the Reforms Bill, a sympathetic and gracious Proclamation was issued from which the following may be noted: “I rely on the new popular assemblies to interpret wisely the wishes of those whom they represent and not to forget the interests of the masses, who cannot yet be admitted to the franchise....Equally do I rely on my officers to respect their new colleagues and to work with them in harmony and kindness, to assist the people and their representatives in an orderly advance towards free institutions.” The Financial relations between the Provinces and the Central Government were decided on the recommendations of the Meston Committee consisting of Sir James Meston, Mr. C. H. Roberts (a former Under-Secretary of State for India) and Mr. E. Hilton-Young (later on, the President of the Currency Commission on the ratio question). This was in March 1920. Lord Sinha was appointed as Governor of Bihar and Orissa. In November 1920 the elections to the Provincial and Indian Legislatures were held. His Majesty had originally intended to depute the Prince of Wales, “the Ambassador of the Empire”, to inaugurate the Indian Legislature; but due to some inconvenience, H. R. H. The Duke of Connaught was sent to India for the said purpose. In the course of the Royal Message on that occasion, His Majesty was pleased to state:—"Simultaneously with the new Constitution in British India, I have gladly assented to the establishment of a Chamber of Princes. And with all my people I pray to Almighty God that by His wisdom and under His guidance India may be led to greater prosperity and contentment and may grow to the fulness of political freedom." In the revised Instrument of Instructions dated 15-3-1921, there is the following important reference:—"For, above all things, it is Our will and pleasure that the plans laid by Our Parliament for the progressive realisation of Responsible government in British India as an integral part of Our Empire may come to fruition, to the end that British India may attain its due place among Our Dominions." In April 1921 Lord Reading became the Governor-General in succession to Lord Chelmsford.

The elections and the working of the Reforms did not receive the full co-operation of the country. As H. R. H. The Duke of Connaught said, "The shadow of Amritsar lengthened over the fair face of India." Even the Moderates had their own misgivings regarding the adequacy of the opportunities offered for attaining self-government with dyarchy as the mechanism for Provincial administration. On September 23, 1921, Rai Bahadur Jadunath Mozumdar moved a Resolution in the Legislative Assembly for the establishment of autonomy in the Provinces and the introduction of responsibility in the Central Government, (vide Minority Report of the Reforms Enquiry Committee). On the 29th September, 1921, Mr. Jamnadas Dwarakdas moved an amendment by which he requested the Governor-General to appoint a committee of officials and non-officials to consider the ways for the introduction of Provincial Autonomy and Responsibility at the Central Government. Sir William Vincent speaking on behalf of the Government, referring to the provision for a Statutory Commission under the Act of 1919 for examining the working of the reforms and the further instalment of reforms to be granted, quoted the following remarks of Mr. Montagu, "If there is a remarkable unforeseen development in Indian conditions in the short space of ten years, the Act does not tie the hands of Parliament and there can always be a Commission in the interval. On Sir William Vincent's suggestion, the following amended resolution was passed by the Assembly without division:— "That this Assembly recommends to the Governor-General in Council that he should convey to the Secretary of State for India the view of this Assembly that the progress made by India in the path of responsible Government warrants a re-examination and revision of the constitution at an earlier date than 1929." To this the reply came to the Governor-General in Lord Peel's Despatch of November 2, 1922, in which the Secretary of State expressed his inability to accept the resolution of the Assembly for further steps towards reforms. On the 22nd February, 1923, Dewan Bahadur T. Ranga Chari moved a resolution before the Assembly expressing extreme dissatisfaction with the Peel Despatch. The debate on this was, after some talk, adjourned sine die. On the 18th July 1923 Dr. (afterwards, Sir. Hari Singh) Gour moved a resolution recommending to the Governor-General to move the Secretary of State to carry out his suggestions in the Governor-General's previous despatch on the subject of further reforms possible under the Constitution. This resolution was carried. In July 1923, the first Legislative Assembly was prorogued.

CONSTITUTIONAL INVESTIGATIONS

The National Congress allowed the Swarajya Party to contest the next elections. The Swarajists entered the Legislative Assembly in substantial numbers to be effective in opposition.

The Muddiman Committee: Genesis:—In the beginning of 1924, the Labour Party came into power for the first time in the History of England, and high hopes of constitutional reforms for India were entertained by the Indians. “ From 1924 began the interminable series of Commissions of Enquiry and of formal and informal consultation which culminated in the Round Table Conferences and the Bill of 1934.” In February 1924, Dewan Bahadur Rangachari moved a resolution recommending “ an early revision of the Government of India Act so that India may secure full self-governing Dominion Status.” Pandit Motilal Nehru moved an amendment suggesting the summoning of a Round Table Conference to recommend the scheme of a Constitution for India, and the holding of a fresh election, the placing of the scheme before the new legislature, and the submission of the same to British Parliament for being embodied in a statute. On the 8th February, 1924, Sir Malcolm Hailey spoke in the Assembly on the question of Dominion Status, and said;—“if you analyse the term’ ‘full Dominion Self-Government, you will see that it is of somewhat wider extent, conveying that not only the executive will be responsible to the legislature but that the legislature will in itself have full powers which are typical of the modern dominion. I say that there is some difference of substance, because responsible government is not necessarily incompatible with limited or restricted powers. It may be that full Dominion self-government is the logical outcome of responsible government; nay, it may be the inevitable and historical development of responsible government, but it is a further and a final step." As the Nehru Report of later years says, "the speech constitutes the beginning of a new current of thought in official circles in India; and much of constitutional ingenuity has been displayed in supporting or refuting this new interpretation of British Policy." On the 18th February, 1924, the amended resolution of Pandit Nehru was adopted by the Assembly. The Government first appointed an official committee to examine the working of the Act and then appointed a formal Committee under the Chairmanship of Sir Alexander Muddiman, which came to be known as the Muddiman Committee, or the Reforms Enquiry Committee.

The Enquiry:—The terms of reference to the Committee were:—" (1) to enquire into the difficulties arising from, or defects inherent in, the working of the Government of India Act and the Rules thereunder in regard to the Central Government and the Governments of the Governors' Provinces; and (2) to investigate the feasibility and desirability of securing remedies for such difficulties or defects consistent with the structure, policy, and purposes of the Act, (a) by action taken under the Act and the Rules, or (b) by such amendments of the Act as appear necessary to rectify any administrative imperfections." The Majority Report of the Committee was signed by Sir A. P. Muddiman, Sir Md. Shafi, the Maharajadhiraja of Burdwan, Mr. A. H. Froom, and Sir. H. Moncrieff-Smith; the Minority consisted of Dr. Sir. Tej Bahadur Sapru, Sir. P. S. Sivaswamy Aiyar, Dr. R. P. Paranjpye, and Mr. M. A. Jinnah. According to both sections, the alleged defects of dyarchy were, " 1. the impinging of the administration of reserved upon that of the transferred subjects, and vice versa, 2. the absence of joint responsibility of the Ministers, 3. the absence of joint deliberations between the two halves of the Government, 4. the attitude of the permanent official towards the reforms, their relations with the Ministers, and their general position in the constitution. 5. the difficulties in the way of the Ministers arising out of the overriding powers of the Governors under the Act, the control of the Government of India and of the Secretary of State; 7. a. the measure of control exercised by the Finance Department, b. the fact that under the rules the Finance Department is in the charge of a member of the Executive Council, who is also in charge of the spending department, c. the disqualification of the Ministers to hold the portfolio of finance by reason of the Devolution Rules".

The Muddiman Report:—The Majority Report recommended relaxation of the control of the India Office in cases affecting purely Indian interests, modification of the procedural rules of the Assembly, the practice of joint deliberation in the Provinces, the payment of the same salary to the Ministers and the Members of the Executive Council, relaxation of control of the Governor over the Ministers, transfer of some more subjects to the Ministers, modification of the franchise, the revision of the Meston Settlement, provision for better representation of the depressed classes and the factory labourers, the declaration of the ineligibility of the Finance Member to be in charge of any spending department, the introduction of Public Service Commissions. The Minority Report was to the effect that Dyarchy was working creakily in the Provinces and recommended that "the proper question to ask was not whether any alternative transitional system can be devised, but whether the constitution should not be put on a permanent basis, with provisions for automatic progress in the future so as to secure stability in the Government and willing co-operation of the people; we can only express the hope that a serious attempt may be made at an early date to solve the question. That this attempt should be made whether by the appointment of a Royal Commission with freer terms of reference and larger scope of enquiry than ours or by any other agency—is a question which we earnestly commend to the notice of the Government." The failure of dyarchy was clear. Lord Birkenhead on a later occasion described dyarchy as "the kind of pedantic hide-bound constitution to which Anglo-Saxon communities had not generally responded and unlikely to make a successful appeal to the community whose political ideals were so largely derived from Anglo-Saxon models".

In August 1925, Mr. V. J. Patel was elected as President of the Legislative Assembly.

The Government moved for the adoption of the Mud-diman Report. Pandit Motilal Nehru, thereupon pleaded for a Round Table Conference for discussing the "National Demand," i. e. the minimum reforms acceptable to the Congress. The official attitude on this subject was not considered to be satisfactory by the Congress, and so in 1926 the Swarajist party withdrew from the legislature.

Lord Reading's Letter to H. E. H. The Nizam:— On the 27th March, 1926, Lord Reading explained thus some important constitutional points regarding Indian States, in a letter to His Exalted Highness the Nizam in reply to H.E.H. The Nizam's letter dated the 20th September, 1925. "The sovereignty of the British Crown is supreme in India, and therefore no Ruler of an Indian State can justifiably claim to negotiate with the British Government on an equal footing. Its supremacy is not based only on treaties and engagements, but exists independently of them and, quite apart from its prerogative in matters relating to foreign powers and policies, it is the right and duty of the British Government, while scrupulously respecting all treaties and engagements, to preserve peace and good order throughout India. The right of the British Government to intervene in the internal affairs of Indian States is another instance of the consequences necessarily involved in the supremacy of the British Crown. I regret that I cannot accept the view that the orders of the Secretary of State on your representation do not amount to a decision.....The varying degrees of internal sovereignty which the Rulers enjoy are all subject to the due exercise by the Paramount Power of this responsibility." This letter led, in the words of the Nehru Report, to much searching of heart in Indian States, and to the constitution of the Butler Committee as will be seen later on.

CONSTITUTIONAL INVESTIGATIONS

Lord Irwin:—In April 1926, Lord Irwin became the Governor-General in succession to Lord Reading. "Lord Irwin won the immediate interest of many Indians because he was a keen practising Christian. For five disturbed years he maintained his peculiar political austerity, and when he left, Englishmen and Indians were discussing the future of India on equal terms." (Thompson and Garret, in "Rise and Fulfilment of British Rule in India.")

The Simon Commission:—On the 26th November, 1927, the Statutory Commission contemplated under Section 84-A of the Government of India Act 1919, was appointed to investigate the nature and extent of the next instalment of Reforms, with Sir John Simon as the Chairman. Section 84-A enacted.—“At the expiration of ten years after the passing of the Government of India Act, 1919, the Secretary of State with the concurrence of both Houses of Parliament, shall submit for the approval of His Majesty the names of persons to act as a Commission for the purpose of this Section”. By the Government of India (Statutory Commission) Act, 1927, word “within” was substituted for the words “at the expiration of”. Lord Birkenhead, the then Secretary of State, interpreted the Section to mean that only Members of Parliament could be appointed to the Commission. “The inclusion of two Indian Members of the House of Lords would have been a useful gesture.” (Thompson and Garret, who remark that if a Muhammadan gentleman was created a peer, then he and Lord Sinha could have come in without infringing even the interpretation put in by Lord Birkenhead.) Referring to these events of 1927, as observed by him during his visit to England in that year, the Rt. Hon’ble Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru stated, (see the “Leader” of January 14, 1936) “At the end of the conversation (with Lord Reading) it was abundantly plain to me that the decision which had been taken at that time to exclude Indians and to keep the Commission an exclusively Parliamentary body had been taken irrevocably. That was the only occasion when on a big question I felt somewhat disappointed with Lord Reading. But I also felt that Lord Birkenhead had made up his mind and that it was somewhat unfortunate that the Labour Party, which was then in opposition, should have agreed with him. In later years it was freely admitted to me by several of my English friends in England, and at least one or two, or three in India, that the decision to exclude public men from India, was a most unfortunate one, and the whole course of events might have been different if it had not been taken".

The Butler Committee:— In May 1927 the Viceroy held a conference at Simla, when a representative group of Princes asked for the appointment of a special committee to examine the relationship between themselves and the Paramount Power. So, on the 16th December 1927, the Earl of Birkenhead, as Secretary of State appointed a committee with Sir Harcourt Butler as Chairman and Viscount Peel and Mr. Holdsworth as members, "(1) to report upon the relationship between the Paramount Power and the Indian States with particular reference to the rights and obligations arising from—(a) treaties, engagements and sanads, and (b) usage, sufferance and other causes and (2) to enquire into the financial and economic relations between British India and the States, and to make any recommendations that the Committee may consider desirable or necessary for their more satisfactory adjustment."

In the Christmas of 1927 the Indian National Congress resolved to boycott the Simon Commission. In 1928, the Indian Legislative Assembly also resolved that it should have nothing to do with the Simon Commission.

The Nehru Report:—On the 12th February 1928, a conference of the representatives of all the political parties met at Delhi for drawing up a constitution acceptable to all the parties, and continued its sittings till February 22, 1928. "The All Parties Conference was a reply to Lord Birkenhead's challenge when he sought to justify the personnel of the Simon Commission by a reference to India's communal and other dissensions." The Conference appointed a committee to report on the following subjects :— whether the legislature should be unicameral or bi-cameral; franchise; declaration of rights of labour and the peasantry; Indian States. The Conference met again on the 8th March, and appointed two sub-committees, one for enquiring into the financial aspects of the separation of Sind, and the other to consider the feasibility of the system of proportional representation. The Conference met again on the 19th May, 1928, at Bombay, considered the reports of the various committees and appointed a committee to consider and determine the principles of the Constitution for India giving due weight to the representations of several organisations and sub-committees for communal unity. Pandit Moti Lal Nehru was Chairman, Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, Sir Ali Imam, Mr. M. S. Aney, and Mr. N. M. Joshi were among the members. The committee submitted the report to Dr. M. A. Ansari, the President of the All Parties Conference on August 10, 1928. In the introduction, they answer the arguments based on Sir Malcolm Hailey's speech of February 8, 1924, already referred to, and the objections to the grant of Dominion Status. In the first six chapters, the evidence on the various controversial questions and the data are analysed. The seventh chapter contains the draft definitions and recommendations relating to the Constitutional status of India, operation of the constitution and the laws, citizenship, fundamental rights, the Parliament of India consisting of the Governor-General representing the King and the Senate and the House of Representatives, the Commonwealth Executive consisting of the Prime Minister and other Ministers, High Commissioner and Foreign Relations, Auditor-General, Provincial Autonomy with an Executive responsible to the Legislature, constitution and jurisdiction of a Supreme Court, appeal to the King in Council, constitution and jurisdiction of High courts, Advocate-General, Revenue and Finance, Railway and Harbour Fund, Defence, Civil Services, Army Services, Indian States, redistribution of Provinces on a linguistic basis, future amendment of the constitution, and communal representation. The separation of Sind as a separate Province was recommended. Two schedules enumerating the central and Provincial subjects were also annexed to the report. The report (since known as the Nehru Report), was adopted by the National Congress in its 1928 Session.

The Butler Committee Report:—The Butler Committee met at Delhi on January 14, 1928, and issued a questionnaire on March 1, 1928. They visited fifteen States and returned to England in May 1928, when the Rt. Hon'ble Sir Leslie Scott, K. C., presented the case of the Princes with the assistance of Colonel Sir Kailas Narain Haksar. They submitted their report on the 14th February, 1929, to Viscount Peel, who had succeeded Lord Birkenhead as Secretary of State.

The Report stated among other things:—"India is one and indivisible, made up of the pink and the yellow. The problem of statesmanship is to hold the two together. Truly it may be said that Indian States are Indian India. Paramount Power means the Crown acting through the Secretary of State and the Governor-General in Council, who are responsible to Parliament. The fact of paramountcy has been acted on and acquiesced in over a long period of time. It is based on treaties, engagements, and sanads, supplemented by usage, sufferance, and by decisions of the Government of India and the Secretary of State embodied in political practice. The policy of the British Government towards the States passed from the original plan of non-intervention in all matters beyond its own ring-fence to the policy of subordinate isolation. That in its turn gave way before the existing conception of union and co-operation with the Paramount Power. Lord Canning said in 1858:—"The Crown stands forth as the unquestioned ruler and Paramount Power in all India, and is, for the first time, brought face to face with its feudatories. There is a reality in the suzerainty of the Sovereign of England, which has never existed before, and which is not only felt but eagerly acknowledged by the Chiefs." In a despatch dated the 30th April, 1860, he added that flagrant mis-government must be prevented or arrested by timely exercise of intervention. With this theory of intervention, modern political practice began, reaching its zenith during Lord Curzon's Viceroyalty.

The Butler Committee Report refers to the Baroda Case (1873-75), the Manipur Case (1891-92), Lord Minto's Udaipur Speech of the 3rd November, 1909, and the letter of Lord Reading to H. E. H. The Nizam, (noted already) as important pronouncements on Paramountcy. Reference is made to the demand for codification of political practice and the constitution of the Chamber of Princes, whereby open conference was substituted for secrecy in ventilating the opinion of the Princes on political practice.

CONSTITUTIONAL INVESTIGATIONS

The Committee said that "the treaties are made with the Crown in England and should be interpreted according to their history, circumstances and traditions, but they are not merely contractual relationship." "The Paramount Power has the right of intervention relating to external affairs, defence, and protection and for good government." They conclude "the Princes should not be handed over without their agreement to a new government responsible to the Indian Legislature. Paramountcy must remain paramount. On paramountcy and paramountcy alone can the States rely for their preservation through the generations that are to come." They recommended that the Viceroy, and not the Governor-General, should be the agent of the Crown in its relations with the Princes. They commended the suggestion "that the time has come to recruit separately from the Universities in England for service in the States alone." The Report also dealt with the financial and economic relations with States, the claims of States to a share of the customs revenue, the adequacy of their contribution to Imperial Defence, the proposal for a Zollverein, the claims of States regarding railways, mints, coinage, manufacture of salt, Posts and Telegraph, opium, excise and harbours.

Paramountcy:—As regards the exercise of Paramountcy, the States can claim a substantially liberal attitude in view of what Sir Robert Holland, with so much of experience has stated, viz:—"a body of usage influencing the relation with the States has come into force through a process which though benevolent, was nevertheless, to some extent arbitrary." The Nehru Report was of opinion that it was untenable legally and historically to claim that the treaties were between the Crown and the States. But the Butler Committee has recognised the relations, as also the Joint Parliamentary Committee of later days. As regards the position of the States the Butler Committee said:—"In fact none of the States ever held international status. Nearly all of them are, or were, subordinate to the Mughal Empire, or the Maharatta Supremacy, or the Sikh Kingdom, and depending on them. Some were rescued, others were created by the British." It may be that all the attributes according to International Law were not possessed by the States. But a perusal of many treaties will show that they were not considered to be mere non-entities as the quotations would imply. The successful rebellion of these states from the respective supremacies referred to was recognised by the Company by entering into separate treaties, instead of dealing with the alleged masters holding the supremacy, if any. Their independent status has been recognised by the treaties ignoring the masters, under whom they were. There was nothing to prevent the States from contracting agreements with the Company of their own right. In any case, some principles of international law may be indirectly invoked for analogy in suitable cases in settling disputes between British India and Indian States.

The Simon Commission Enquiry—The Simon Commission paid two visits to India, the first lasting from the 3rd February 1928, to the 31st March 1928, and the second from the 11th October 1928 to the 13th April 1929. They proposed the method of "Joint Free Conference" by which an Indian wing of the conference to work as colleagues of the Commissioners was created. A central committee composed of the members elected by the Indian Legislature was to sit with the Commission during the whole of their tours and deliberations in public, while Provincial Committees elected by the respective provincial legislatures were to sit with the Commission in the respective provinces. The Central Provinces Legislative Council did not elect a committee. The Indian Legislative Assembly also did not elect any representatives, and so the Governor-General nominated some of the Assembly members to the Central Committee. All other legislatures elected members to the committees to which they were asked to elect representatives.

The General Elections in Britain brought the Labour party in office, and reliance was placed on the speech of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald some time before taking office (July 2, 1929) in which he said:—"I hope within a period of months rather than years, there will be a new Dominion added to the Commonwealth of Nations, a Dominion of another race, a Dominion which will find self-respect as an equal within the Commonwealth. I refer to India".

The Joint conference of the Simon Commission and of the Indian Central Committee met between the 19th June 1929, and the 30th July, 1929. On the 16th October, 1929, Sir John Simon addressed a letter to the Prime Minister (Mr. Ramsay MacDonald) in which he stated:—"As our investigation proceeded, we have become more and more impressed, in considering the direction which the future constitutional development of India is likely to take, with the importance of bearing in mind the relation which may develop between British India and the Indian States. It is evident to us that whatever may be the scheme which Parliament will ultimately approve for the future constitution and governance of British India, it is essential that the methods by which the future relationship between these two constituent parts of Greater India may be adopted, should be fully examined. It seems to us that what would be required would be the setting up of some sort of conference, and that in this conference His Majesty's Government would meet both representatives of British India and representatives of the States (not necessarily together) for the purpose of seeking the greatest possible measure of agreement for the final proposals which it would later be the duty of His Majesty's Government to submit to Parliament. The procedure by the Joint Parliamentary Committee conferring with delegations from the Indian Legislatures and other bodies, which was previously contemplated and is referred to in my letter to the Viceroy on February 6, 1928, would still be appropriate for the examination of the Bill, when it is subsequently placed before Parliament; but would, we think, obviously have to be preceded by such a conference as we have indicated."

To this, the Prime Minister replied on the 25th October, 1929, in which he said:—"His Majesty's Government are also greatly concerned to find means by which they may approach the treatment of the broad question of British-Indian constitutional advance in co-operation with all those who can authoritatively speak for British-Indian opinion. They will propose to invite representatives of different parties and interests in British India and representatives of Indian States to meet them separately or together, as the circumstances may demand, for the purpose of conference and discussion in regard both to the British-Indian and All-Indian problems. It will be their earnest hope that by this means it may subsequently prove possible on these grave issues to submit definite proposals to Parliament, on a wide measure of general assent. With my best wishes for the success of your future labours.....”

An interim report on the progress of education in India was submitted by the Auxiliary Committee of which Sir Philip Hartog was the chairman.

In the summer of 1929 Lord Irwin went to England to confer with the British Cabinet on the proper solution of the Indian Constitutional problem. On his return he made the following important declaration on the 31st October, 1929:—“I am authorised, on behalf of His Majesty’s Government, to state clearly that, in their judgment, it is implicit in the declaration of 1917 that the natural issue of India’s constitutional progress as there contemplated, is the attainment of Dominion Status. His Majesty’s Government will propose to invite representatives of the Indian States to meet them separately or together....for the purpose of conference and discussion both of the British Indian and All-India problems.”

The Simon Report :—In November 1929, the Provincial Committees and the Central Committee sent their reports to the Simon Commission. On 12th May 1930, the Simon Commission submitted the report to Parliament. In July 1930, the Indian Legislative Assembly declared that the recommendations of the Simon Commission were inadequate and unacceptable (See Appendix H. 1—for select opinion.).

If the constitution of the Simon Commission engendered uneasy feelings, the publication of the Report “only intensified the civil disobedience movement" which was already in swing from March 1930. The Commission stated:—"In writing this report we have made no allusion to the events of the last few months in India. In fact, the whole of our principal recommendations were arrived at and unanimously agreed upon before these events occurred. We have not altered a line of our Report, for it is necessary to look beyond particular incidents and take a longer view." With regard to the recommendations themselves, it was hardly likely that with the All Parties Report before them even the more moderate section of the public in India would have been satisfied with the reforms suggested by the Simon Commission. "Beyond a few adjustments to a creaky machinery, nothing very far-reaching was suggested. While dyarchy was to terminate, the Ministers in the Provinces may be elected members of the legislature or not, and where and when the Governor considers it necessary, it will contain an official element. Indirect election was recommended for the Central Legislative Assembly to be renamed the "Federal Assembly", the electors being the members of the respective provincial legislature. Indirect election was recommended for the Council of State in the case of those Provinces which had a second chamber. The Assembly was to have the right to vote certain indirect taxes also to be selected by the Governor-General himself. The central executive was to be the same as that under the Act of 1919 with the prescribed qualification of service under the Crown for ten years for three of its members. The Commander-in-chief was not to be a member of the executive Council or of the legislature. The Security Services (Police and the I. C. S.) were to be recruited by the Secretary of State; the same system was to be extended to the Irrigation and the Forest Services. The programmes of Indianisation laid down by the Lee Commission which were themselves complained by the Indians to be inadequate, were to be maintained. The High Courts were to be centralised as also the expenditure therefor. The size of the Council of India was to be reduced with more recent Indian experience being required for membership. A Council of Greater India was to be constituted with consultative and deliberative functions for discussing matters of common concern between Indian States and British India." In the atmosphere in which it was issued it did not receive a favourable consideration.

Round Table Conference:— As foreshadowed in the Prime Minister's letter to Sir John Simon in October 1929, and in Lord Irwin's speech of October 1929, the First Round Table Conference was held in the autumn of 1930 and January, 1931. "The Simon Report was shelved, and the Conference began working out the terms of an early federation." The federal idea was expounded by the British Indian delegates and agreed to by His Highness the Maharaja of Bikaner, on behalf of the States' delegates. On the 15th January 1931, in a concluding address to the Conference on the safeguards for the minorities, the Prime Minister said:—"In such statutory safeguards as may be made for meeting the needs of the transitional period, it will be a primary concern of His Majesty's Government to see that the reserved powers are so framed as not to prejudice the advance of India through the new constitution to full responsibility for her own government."

The Federal Idea:—The delegates from British India and the Indian States returned to India with the determination to help the cause of federation. There was, however, a trend of thought among the States which wanted that the Princes should not join the federation each in his own manner and on his own terms, but should meet in the Chamber of Princes for entering the Federation as a body. Later, the general terms for federation were settled, and the differences were only regarding the seats in the Houses of the Central legislature. This was facilitated by the idea of some association with Indian States having been before the public and the statesmen for a long time. Lord Lytton's proposal to constitute an Imperial Privy Council comprising some of the great Princes, Lord Dufferin's institution of the Imperial Service Troops, Lord Curzon's plan for a Council of Ruling Princes, Lord Minto's scheme for an Imperial Advisory Council and for an Imperial Council of Ruling Princes are instances. "Lord Hardinge made no secret of his desire to seek the collective opinion of the Princes as trusted colleagues on matters affecting their Order. And in responding to His Excellency's invitation, Their Highnesses The Maharajahs of Gwalior and Indore also laid stress upon the essential identity of interest between the two halves of India. Lord Chelmsford carried the system of conferences further by utilising them for the purpose of discussing general questions affecting the States as a whole; and His Highness the Maharaja Gaekwar in welcoming the new development expressed the hope that what had by that time become an annual conference, would develop into a permanent Council or Assembly of Princes. Moreover the claim of the States to be heard in matters of Imperial concern were signally recognised by the deputation of His Highness the Maharaja of Bikaner to the meeting of the Imperial Conference and the War Cabinet." (M. C.

CONSTITUTIONAL INVESTIGATIONS

Report). In 1918 His Highness the Maharaja of Patiala was similarly deputed. In the Montagu-Chelmsford Report, it is stated, "Looking ahead to the future, we can picture India to ourselves as presenting the external semblance of some form of federation. The provinces will ultimately become self-governing units, held together by the Central Government, which will deal solely with matters of common concern to all of them. But the matters common to the British Provinces are also to a great extent those in which the Native States are interested—defence, tariffs, exchange, opium, salt, railways, and posts and telegraphs. The natural concentration of the Government of India upon such matters will, therefore, make it easier for the States, while retaining the autonomy which they cherish in internal matters, to enter into closer association with the central Government if they wish to do so." *The constitution of the Chamber of Princes was another step. The Proclamation of the 8th February 1921, contained the declaration:—"In my former Proclamations I repeated the assurance given on many occasions by My Royal Predecessors and Myself, of My determination ever to maintain unimpaired

* Dicey wrote in 1914 thus, "Thirty years ago the nature of Federalism had received in England very inadequate investigation. In this, as in other matters, 1914 strangely contrasts with 1884. The notion is now current that federalism contains the solution of every Constitutional problem which perplexes British Statesmanship.....Federalism in short has at present the vague and therefore the strong and imaginative charm which has been possessed at one time throughout Europe by the Parliamentary Constitutionalism of England, and at another by the revolutionary republicanism of France."

the privileges, rights, and dignities of the Princes of India. The Princes may rest assured that this pledge remains inviolate and inviolable." The Indian States always get the advantage of representation in the annual delegation to the Assembly of the League of Nations. The Butler Committee Report also stated "We have left the door open to closer union. There is nothing in our proposals to prevent the adoption of some form of federal union." In November, 1929, His Highness the Maharaja of Bikaner said:—"The Princes have openly given expression to the belief that the ultimate solution of the Indian problem and the ultimate goal—whenever the circumstances are favourable and the time is ripe for it—is Federation, which word has no terrors for the Princes and the Government of the States." It will thus be seen that the idea of some sort of union was acceptable to public opinion for some time past, though views might differ as to details regarding the powers to be vested in the central government. Discussion was ranging on the nature of the federal subjects and the seats due to the States in the federal legislature.

The British Indian Delegates had known the difficulties and complications of the problem of federation equally well, as the work in the sub-committees had shown them. The sub-committees examined questions relating to Federal Structure, N.W.F. Provinces and other provinces, Franchise, Services, Burma, Defence, Sind separation and Minorities. So, they, on their return to India, impressed both on the Government and on the Congress the necessity for arriving at some agreement. As a result, on the 5-3-31, the Gandhi-Irwin Pact was concluded; the Congress decided to suspend the Civil Disobedience Movement, and to participate in the Second Round Table Conference. The pact was ratified by the Karachi Congress, 1931.

The Second R. T. C.:—Mahatma Gandhi went to the Second Round Table Conference as the sole representative of the Congress. By that time, the Labour Party was out of office in Britain (September 1931), and so the Government attitude was supposed to have 'stiffened a bit.' After a series of meetings, especially of the Federal Structure Committee, the Conference dissolved as no solution could be arrived at regarding the allocation of seats in the legislature. Three Committees were appointed to tour in India and submit reports. They were (1) to investigate the revision of the franchise and the constituencies, (2) to report on the recommendations of the Federal Finance Committee, and (3) to examine financial and other problems relating to the States and the Federation. Each State had its own individual claims to put forward before the conditions of joining the federation were finally settled.*

* There are 109 States of which the Rulers are members of the Chamber of Princes in their own right, with a population of 60 millions and a revenue of 43 Crores of rupees. There are 126 States represented by 12 Rulers elected from among themselves, with a population of 8 millions, and a revenue of 2 Crores of rupees in the aggregate. Besides these there are the 300 Estates and Jagirs held on grants and Sanads. "It includes also States economically, politically and administratively advanced, and States, patriarchal or quasi—feudal in character which still linger in mediaeval atmosphere: States with varying political powers."

The Committees:—The year 1932 opened with a regular programme by the Government for the vindication of law and order by putting down the civil disobedience movement in its disturbing features. From January 1932, the North West Frontier Province was raised to the status of a Governor's Province. In January 1932, a Consultative Committee was constituted by the Government of India for considering the recommendations of the Franchise (Lothian) Committee, Federal Finance (Percy) Committee and the Indian States Enquiry (Davidson) Committee, when their reports were published. But the meetings of the Consultative Committee were twice postponed.

Communal Award:—On the 17th August 1932, the Prime Minister decided the question of allotment of seats by what came to be called the 'Communal Award'. The importance of the problem can be seen from the figures furnished in the Simon Report. In Bengal, the Muhammadan population amounts to $25\frac{1}{4}$ millions out of 47 millions; in the Punjab $11\frac{1}{2}$ millions out of 20 millions; in Assam the Muhammadans constitute 28% of the population; in Bombay 19%; in U. P. 14%; in Bihar and Orissa 10%; in Madras 6%; in C. P., they are half a million out of 14 millions; in N. W. F. P., they are 2 millions of $2\frac{1}{4}$ millions; in Indian States the total Hindu population is $53\frac{1}{2}$ millions, while the Muhammadans are $9\frac{1}{4}$ millions; the Hyderabad State has a population of $12\frac{1}{2}$ millions out of which 2 millions are Muhammadans. The Prime Minister stated:—"We should only be too glad if at any stage before the proposed Bill becomes law, the communities can reach an agreement among themselves. But the Government are convinced that no further negotiations will be of any advantage, and they can be no party to them. They will, however, be ready and willing to substitute for their scheme, any scheme whether in respect of any one or more of the Governor's Provinces or in respect of the whole of British India, that is generally agreed to and accepted by all the parties concerned".

There were differences of opinion regarding the grant of separate electorates to the so-called 'Depressed Classes'. They form 57% of the Hindu population in Bengal; 31% in U. P.; 42% in the Punjab; 33% in C. P.; 18% in Madras; and 11% in Bombay (Simon Report). Mahatma Gandhi, who was then in prison, resolved on a 'fast unto death,' from the 20th September, 1932, unless the scheme of separate electorates for these classes was modified. After the strenuous efforts of the Hindu leaders including Dr. Ambedkar, a pact which came to be known as the Poona or Yerwada Pact was arrived at on the 25th September, 1932, by which separate electorates were given up. The Pact was accepted by the British Cabinet, who modified the Communal Award accordingly. The Mahatma gave up his fast on the 26th September.

The Third R. T. C.:— In September, the Government declared that it would be necessary to hold further discussions in London for settling the plans regarding an All-India Federation, Responsibility at the Centre and Provincial Autonomy, and that a small body of the representatives of the States and British India would be invited for the purpose. The Third R. T. C. held its sittings from the 17th November, 1932, to the 24th December, 1932, and was concerned mainly with the question of safeguards, special responsibilities, and the consideration of the three

Reports of the Committees appointed after the Second R. T. C. The Lothian Committee recommended the conferment of the franchise on about 27% of the population. The Percy Committee recommended the allocation of the revenues between the centre and the federal units and conferment of legislative powers therefor. The Davidson Committee recommended the remission of cash contributions by the States, that each State should be allowed to keep for itself duties realised on goods imported through its own ports, and compensation to States for the advantages given up by them. Sir Samuel Hoare declared:—"I have made it quite clear that all questions governed by that general term 'paramountcy' do not come into the federal scheme." The Conference enabled the Government to formulate their views on the methods for States' entry into the federation, on the delimitation of subjects into federal and non-federal, the creation of the Sind and the Orissa Provinces, the Defence Budget, the Indianisation of the Army, the policy regarding the employment of troops outside India, the Co-operation of the federal ministry, the Defence Member, and other subjects. Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Mr. Jayakar submitted an important memorandum in which they pointed out that federation should not be delayed, that central responsibility should come even if the States did not join in large numbers, that the financial stability of the federation was beyond the range of doubt, that safe-guards should not go so far as to take away from the central and provincial Governments the right to subsidise and protect industries, that the special responsibility of the Governor-General and the Governor should not conflict with the powers of the Ministers, that there should be a declaration of fundamental rights, and that the Council of India might be abolished.

The White Paper:—In March 1933, the Government published the “White Paper” outlining their scheme of Constitutional reforms for the Indian Federation of States and Provinces. After examining the pros and cons of the several problems in the light of the opinions expressed in the conferences, memoranda, reports and representations, it was framed in the form of a draft statute for the sake of convenience, and forms the basis of the Government of India Act of 1935. The constitutional structure was discussed by the Parliamentary Committee and passed with modifications. The proposals in the “White Paper” fell under three main heads commonly referred to as Provincial Autonomy, Federation, and Responsibility at the Centre with details on matters like the distribution of legislative powers, Finance, the Services, Judiciary, Commercial discrimination, constituent powers, Reserve Bank, Railway Board, India Council, Auditor-General, Advocate-General and transitory provisions. (See Appendix H for opinion of Thompson and Garret.)

The J. P. C.—On April 11, 1933, Parliament appointed a Joint Select Committee of sixteen members from the House of Commons and sixteen Peers to report on the “White Paper”. The Marquis of Linlithgow was elected as the Chairman. The Indian Delegates from British India and the Indian States acted as “assessors”; but they were not entitled to vote on any issue, nor to submit any report to Parliament. Several witnesses appeared before the Committee to represent the various aspects of the constitutional problem. Sir Samuel Hoare, the Secretary of State, himself offered as a witness and answered over 15,750 questions. Along with other memoranda, the memorandum of Sir

Malcolm Hailey on Federal Finance was also placed before the J. P. C. An important contention of the British Indian witnesses was that the goal of Dominion Status should be distinctly enunciated in the Preamble. Reliance was placed on the several announcements made on behalf of the Government, and on the Royal Proclamations issued by His Majesty from time to time. In September, 1933, Lord Willingdon said:—"It was the Government's policy to rush with the reforms as hard as they could go, so as to help India forward to Dominion Status and absolute equality with the other Dominions."

It was attempted to explain away these declarations by stating that they would not bind Parliament as Parliament was not a party to these declarations. But the point was answered thus by the Rt. Hon'ble Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru in the course of an article in the "Twentieth Century" of January 1935.;—"It may be a good dialectical point in constitutional polemics to say that Parliament is not bound by these pledges; but it is very poor statesmanship to say so and act upon it" (See Appendix H for the opinion of Dr. A. B. Keith).

The Aga Khan Memorandum:— Among the memoranda submitted to the J. P. C., the Joint Memorandum submitted by the British Indian Delegates on the 17th November 1933, was the most representative. The modifications to the White Paper which they suggested, constituted according to them, the minimum which must be granted to India in order to satisfy the legitimate political aspirations of the people. They pleaded for declaration of Dominion Status as the goal, quoting besides other declarations, the following extract from the Imperial Message of February 1921. "For years, it may be for generations, patriotic and loyal Indians, have dreamed of Swaraj for their motherland. Today you have the beginnings of Swaraj within my Empire, and widest scope and ample opportunity for progress to the liberty which my other Dominions enjoy." The Memorandum recommended that a definite date might be fixed for the inauguration of the Federation in the Constitution Act. They pointed out that the White Paper proposals regarding the Indian control over Army administration "actually make the constitutional position worse than at present" and recommended (1) a definite programme of Indianisation with reference to a time-limit of twenty or twenty-five years, (2) the appointment of a non-official Indian, either an elected member or a State representative in the Federal Legislature, as Army Counsellor, (3) the continuance of the present policy of the control by the Finance Department of Military expenditure, (4) joint consultations between the Ministers and the Counsellors of Reserved Subjects (Defence, Foreign Affairs, and Ecclesiastical Department), on all subjects and questions relating to Army policy and Army Budget Estimates, (5) Consultation with the Federal Legislature before the employment of the Indian Army outside India, and (6) the reduction of military expenditure and the constitution of the Statutory Committee of Indian Defence. They pleaded for designating the proposed Financial Adviser as one to the entire Government. Regarding commercial discrimination, they said:—"We must point out that if the clauses are drawn so widely as to prevent legitimate discrimination, the Government would be driven to State socialism as the only method by which the provisions of the Act would be circumvented.....

.....We would, however, very strongly object to any draft which makes it impossible for India to discriminate against subjects of the Dominions and Colonies which impose disabilities on Indian subjects." They stated that "a friendly settlement by negotiation is by far the most appropriate and satisfactory method of dealing with the complicated matter (reciprocity with British commercial community).....We see grave practical objection to any constitutional provisions against administrative discrimination." They pleaded for direct election to the Legislature and for definite provision regulating the procedure for the participation of States' members in matters of exclusively British Indian interest. They opposed the creation of Second Chambers in Bengal, Bihar, and U. P. They stated,:—"No part of the White Paper proposals has caused more dissatisfaction in India than the provision relating to the Public Services.....Very strong objection has been taken in India to the scheme by which the Secretary of State will continue to recruit on the present basis for the two very important services, namely the Indian Civil Service and the Indian Police." They recommended that the Governors of Provinces should be selected from amongst public men in Great Britain and in India. In conclusion they stressed on incorporating provision for the automatic growth of the constitution without the interposition of any enquiry by a statutory commission like the Simon Commission and "without involving Parliamentary legislation, except in a few strictly limited cases." Lord Willingdon was on leave in England from the 16th May to the 16th August 1934.

The J. P. C. Report :-The Joint Parliamentary Committee submitted their report in October 1934, which was published on November 23, 1934. The material available for the Committee was indeed in the nature of a deluge. But the recommendations of the British Indian Delegates were not accepted. The report stated that "a recognition of Indian aspirations, while it is the necessary preface to any study of Indian Constitutional problems, is an insufficient guide to their solution. Responsible Government, to which those aspirations are mainly directed today, is not an automatic device which can be manufactured to specification." The Committee approved of the abolition of dyarchy in the Provinces as provincial autonomy was a natural development, but recommended dyarchy in the centre as constitutional development should be evolutionary. The idea of central responsibility without States was not considered as a solution of the problem of Indian federation. They asked the Parliament to be resolute and decisive in choosing without fear or favour the solution for the grave issues of the Indian Constitutional problem.

On the details of the various proposals, they generally accepted the scheme of the White Paper, the departures from which were only a few, necessitated to make the report acceptable to the more conservative section in Britain. The Committee recommended second chambers for Bombay and Madras also, indirect election for the federal Legislature, the constitution of the Council of State on a more permanent basis, the constitution of an Advisory Council for the Secretary of State in the place of the India Council which was recommended to be abolished, and strong and clear conditions against commercial and other forms of discrimination and regarding other safeguards, and the continuance of the control of the Secretary of State over the key services.

The Committee recommended that institutions similar to the Council of Agricultural Research should be established for Public Health and Education; that equality of chances "should be extended as regards the holding of office under the federal Government to subjects of Indian States;" that strict and impartial principles of recruitment and promotion in the public service should be adopted. As regards the recruitment of High Court Judges it was suggested by some politicians that one-fourth of the number of appointments should go to Barristers, one-fourth to the members of the Indian Bar, one-fourth to the Provincial Service men, and one-fourth to the I. C. S. who should be eligible only if they are also Barristers at law, and that Provincial Judicial Officers should be eligible only if they were duly enrolled at the Bar before their first appointment in the Judiciary.*

The Bill:—The first reading of the Bill framed by the Government on the lines of the White Paper with the modification suggested by the J. P. C. Report took place in Parliament in December 1934. The Bill received the Royal Assent on August 2, 1935. (The Parliament ordered later that the Act relating to India might be printed separately from the portion relating to Burma).

*Regarding the Ecclesiastical Department, Major Atlee and his colleagues wrote:—"We think it would be very much better to abolish this Department and include religious ministrations as an integral part of the Army administration... We would go further and propose that so long as we have an Army and services in India whose spiritual needs are entirely different from those of the peoples amongst whom they serve, it would be a gracious act on our part if the necessary expenses were placed on British instead of on Indian Revenues."

CHAPTER IV

THE NEW CONSTITUTION.

THE FEDERATION OF INDIA.

Introductory:— The Government of India Act, 1935, provides for a Federal Constitution for India. The rights and powers hitherto belonging to His Majesty and appertaining to the government of India are exercisable by His Majesty, except in so far as may otherwise be provided in the Act, or otherwise directed by His Majesty. The powers of the Crown relating to Indian States in matters concerning Paramountcy and those not coming within the Federal sphere, shall be exercisable by His Majesty's Representative in that behalf. The Governor-General of India may be appointed as such Representative also, though the office of the Governor-General is distinct and separate from that of the Representative for the exercise of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States, viz. the Viceroy. There shall be a Commander-in-Chief of His Majesty's Forces in India appointed under the Royal Sign Manual. (Sections. 2-4.)*

The Federal Units:— The units of the Federation are 1. The Governors' Provinces. 2. The Indian States acceding to the Federation. The Chief Commissioners' Provinces shall be included in the Federation so established. The

* The number of the relevant Sections of the Government of India Act, 1935, is given to facilitate reference for interpretation, and for further elucidation of the matter summarised.

Federation shall be brought into force on the issue of a Proclamation by His Majesty. Such Proclamation may be issued on an address being presented by each House of Parliament, and when the Rulers entitled to choose 52 members of the Council of State and the aggregate population of whose States amounts to at least one-half of the total population of Indian States, have acceded to the Federation. (S. 5)

Accession of States:— If His Majesty has signified his acceptance of an Instrument of Accession executed by the Ruler of a State, such State shall be deemed to have acceded to the Federation. The Instrument shall declare that he accedes with the intention that all Federal authorities, including legislative and judicial, shall exercise in relation to the State functions vested in them subject to the terms thereof, and for the purpose only of the Federation. The Ruler thereby assumes the obligation that the relevant provisions of the Act will be given effect to in his State so far as they are applicable. The Instrument shall state the extent to which and the subjects in which the Federal Legislature shall enact laws for his State; and there may be supplementary Instruments also. The Instrument shall not be accepted if the terms thereof are inconsistent with the scheme of Federation embodied in the Act. After the Federation is established, the request of a Ruler for Accession to the Federation shall be transmitted to His Majesty through the Governor-General. If the request is made 20 years after the establishment of the Federation, the Governor-General shall not transmit it unless an address for transmitting it is presented to him by each Chamber of the Federal Legislature. A State which has acceded shall be called a "Federated State" and all Courts shall take judicial notice of all Instruments of Accession and their acceptance. (S. 6)

The Executive:— The executive authority of the Federation shall be exercised on behalf of His Majesty by the Governor-General. His annual salary is Rs. 250,800. The executive authority of the Federation extends to all matters coming within the legislative competence of the Federal Legislature, to the raising of military forces exercisable by His Majesty, to the jurisdiction over tribal areas. But executive interference in Provincial affairs or in a Federated State is permissible only to the extent to which it is otherwise provided in the Act and the Instrument of Accession. Commissions in the Army shall be granted by His Majesty as in the past. The executive authority of a Ruler is restricted only to the extent to which the executive authority of a Federation becomes exercisable by virtue of a Federal Law. (S. 8)

Council of Ministers:—The Council of Ministers shall consist of not more than ten to aid and advise the Governor-General in matters except in so far as he is required to act in his discretion or exercise his individual judgment under the Act in which matters his jurisdiction shall depend on his own interpretation. The G.-G. may preside at the meetings of the Council of Ministers. The Ministers shall hold office at his pleasure, and he may act according to his discretion regarding summoning and dismissal. A Minister shall cease to hold office if he is not a member of either Chamber of the Federal Legislature for six months; his salary shall not be varied during his term of office.

Reserved Subjects:—The functions of the Governor-General regarding Defence, Ecclesiastical affairs, tribal areas and external affairs (except relations between the Federation and the Dominions) shall be exercised in his discretion; for this purpose he may appoint counsellors not exceeding three to assist him. (S. 11)

G-G's. Special Responsibilities: — The G-G has the following responsibilities:—Prevention of grave menace to the tranquillity of India; safe-guarding financial stability and credit of the Federation; safe-guarding of the legitimate interests of the minorities; safe-guarding of the right of Public servants and their dependants; prevention of the misuse of legislative discrimination; prevention of British or Burmese action subjecting goods to discriminatory or penal treatment; protection of rights of Indian States and of the dignity of their Rulers; prevention of the obstacles to the discharge of his functions in which he is required by the Act to act in his discretion or to exercise his individual judgment. In any matter involving his special responsibility, he shall exercise his individual judgment. (S. 12)

Instrument of Instructions:—The Secretary of State shall place before Parliament the draft Instrument of Instructions to the G.-G. further proceedings on which shall not be taken except on an address by both the Houses of Parliament to His Majesty praying that the Instrument may be issued. The Secretary of State shall have superintendence and control in matters in which the G.-G. is required by the Act to act in his discretion or exercise his individual judgment. (S. 14)

To give advice to the Governor-General in the discharge of his special responsibility for safeguarding the financial stability of the Federation and to the Federal Ministry in financial matters if consulted, the G-G shall appoint a person to be his financial adviser, who shall hold office during the G.-G's pleasure. In selecting the adviser, except in making the appointment of the first adviser, the G-G shall consult the ministers. For giving legal advice and for performing other duties of a legal character, if required, the G.-G in the exercise of his individual judgment shall appoint an Advocate-General, who must be a person qualified to be appointed a Judge of the Federal Court, on such remuneration as the G.-G may think fit. He shall have right of audience in all Courts in British India, and in a case in which federal interests are concerned, in all courts in any Federated State. In consultation with the ministers, the G-G may frame rules for the allocation of portfolios and conduct of business of the Federal Government.

Federal Legislature:— The Federal Legislature shall consist of His Majesty represented by the G-G. and two Chambers, viz. The Council of State, and the Federal Assembly. The Council of State shall consist of 156 representatives of British India and not more than 104 representatives of Indian States. Out of 156 seats allotted to British India, 150 will be filled up by election from the Governors' Provinces, Chief Commissioners' Provinces and Communities. The Council shall be a permanent body not subject to dissolution, but one-third of the members shall retire in every third year. The Assembly shall consist of 250 members of British India, and not more than 125 representatives of Indian States. The normal duration of the Assembly is five years, the expiration of which period shall operate as a dissolution. The Chamber must meet at least once in a year. The interval between the last meeting of one session and the first meeting of the next session must not be more than twelve months. The G-G may in his discretion summon and prorogue the Chambers, or dissolve the Assembly, and has the power to address and send messages to the Chambers with respect to a pending bill or otherwise; the matter referred to therein shall be taken into consideration by the Chamber to which the message is addressed.

Every minister, counsellor, and the Advocate-General shall have the right to speak in and take part in the proceedings of the Chambers (or committees thereof to which they may be nominated) but shall not be entitled to vote, unless otherwise provided for. The Council has the right to choose the President and the Deputy President who shall vacate their offices on ceasing to be members of the House, and may resign the offices, and may be removed by a majority voting for the resolution for removal of which fourteen days' previous notice is given. In the absence of the President, the Deputy President shall preside. If the office of Deputy President is vacant, such member as the G.-G may appoint, shall act. In the absence of the Deputy President from any sitting, such person as may be determined by the rules of procedure of the Council shall preside. In the absence of such person, any person determined by the Council shall act as President. The President and Deputy President shall receive the salaries fixed by Act of Federal Legislature. In the Assembly the title of the person elected to preside is known as the Speaker, and provision is made for a Deputy Speaker also. The Law relating to the election, remuneration, filling up of vacancy of the Speaker and the Deputy Speaker, is the same as the corresponding provision for the President and the Deputy President of the Council of State respectively. Matters before the Houses shall be decided by a majority of votes of the members present and voting. The person presiding has only a casting vote. The quorum for a meeting is one-sixth of the total number of members.

Every member shall take the appropriate oath. No person shall be a member of both the Chambers. A member's seat shall become vacant by his resignation or by his becoming subject to any of the disqualifications for membership. A person shall be disqualified to be chosen as and to be a member if he is an official (other than those holding excepted offices), if he is of unsound mind, or is an undischarged insolvent, or is convicted for or found guilty of illegal election practices, or has been sentenced to not less than two years' imprisonment (unless five years have elapsed since his release), or has failed to duly lodge a return of election expenses required by law (unless five years have elapsed since the date on which the return was due). A person serving a term of transportation or imprisonment for a criminal offence is ineligible. A person holding a ministership in the Federation or in a Province or in a Federated State, though belonging to the regular service in India shall not be deemed to be an official under the Crown in India for the purpose of the provisions relating to ineligibility noted above. If a member absents himself without the permission of the Chamber for sixty days excluding periods of prorogation, the Chamber may declare his seat vacant. Adjournments for more than four consecutive days will be excluded from this computation. The penalty for sitting and voting when not qualified is rupees five hundred which may be recovered as a debt due to the Federation. The members have freedom of speech; no person shall be liable in respect of the publication by or under the authority of either Chamber of any report, paper, votes or proceedings. Until the privileges of the members are defined by Act of the Federal Legislature, the existing privileges of the members of the Indian Legislature shall be enjoyed by them. Neither the Legislature nor any Committee thereof shall have any punitive or disciplinary powers other than power to remove or exclude persons infringing the rules or behaving in a disorderly manner. Subject to the safeguarding of confidential matter from disclosure, a person may be punished in a court for refusing to give evidence or produce a document on notice for production. Members shall be entitled to receive allowances under the existing rates until the Federal Legislature fixes the rates of allowances and salaries of Members.

Legislative Procedure:— A bill may originate in either Chamber. A pending bill shall not lapse due to the prorogation of the chambers, or due to the dissolution of the Assembly if the Council is considering the Bill which has not been passed by the Assembly. A Bill pending in the Assembly lapses on the dissolution of the Assembly. (S. 30) if a Bill has not lapsed by the dissolution of the Assembly, the Governor-General acting in his discretion by message or notification, may call for a joint sitting of both Houses if a Bill passed by one Chamber is rejected by the other, or is kept by the other Chamber for more than six months, or when the chambers disagree as to amendments to the Bill. If the Bill relates to finance or matters in which he is required to act in his discretion or exercise his individual judgment, the Governor-General may call for a joint sitting to avoid delay in the passing of the Bill, even though six months have not elapsed since its being passed by one Chamber, or it is not finally rejected, or final disagreement regarding amendments has not taken place. If at a joint sitting, a Bill, with such amendments as are agreed to, is passed by a majority, then it shall be deemed to have been passed by the Indian Legislature. A joint session may be held though a dissolution of the Assembly has intervened since the Governor-General's notification of his intention to summon a joint sitting (S. 31). When a bill is passed by the Chambers, the Governor-General may declare either that he assents to the Bill in His Majesty's name, or that he withholds assent therefrom, or that he reserves the Bill for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure, or return the Bill with a message for reconsideration of specific provisions or considering the desirability of introducing amendments. A Bill reserved for signification of His Majesty's pleasure shall not become an Act unless the Governor-General notifies His Majesty's assent within twelve months after it is presented to the Governor-General on having been passed by the chambers. An act assented to by the Governor-General may be disallowed by His Majesty within twelve months of the G.-G's assent. (S. 32)

Financial matters:—The G-G shall cause the Annual Financial statement to be laid before the Legislature. It shall show distinctly the expenditure required for due discharge of his responsibilities and expenditure charged on Revenue accounts. The salary and allowances of the G-G's Ministers, Counsellors, Financial adviser, Advocate-General, Chief Commissioners, Judges of the Federal Court, and pensions of High Court Judges, debt charges for which the Federation is liable, expenditure in connection with defence, ecclesiastical affairs, external affairs (as come within the G-G's. discretion), administration of tribal and excluded areas, and functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States, sums required for satisfying any decree or award of Court or arbitral tribunal shall be charged on the Revenues of the Federation (S. 33). These are not subject to the vote of the Legislature. But they may be discussed in the Legislatures except the items under salary and allowances of the Governor-General and expenditure for discharging the functions of the Crown in its relation with Indian States. Items not charged on the Revenues shown above, shall be submitted in the form of demands for grants to the Federal Assembly and then to the Council of State who may assent to, or refuse assent to, or reduce, the amount. If the Assembly has refused a demand, the demand shall not be submitted to the Council unless the G-G directs. If the Assembly has reduced the amount, only the reduced amount shall be submitted to the Council unless the G-G otherwise directs. If the chambers differ, there may be a joint sitting at the instance of the G-G. The decision of the majority at the joint meeting shall be deemed to be the decision of the two chambers. No demand for grant shall be made except on the recommendation of the G-G. (S. 34) The G-G shall authenticate by his signature a schedule showing the grants made by the chambers, the sum required for expenditure charged on the revenue, and sums certified by him as required for the discharge of his special responsibilities which were refused or reduced by the chambers. The schedule shall not be open to discussion by the Legislature. Supplementary demands may also be made. A Bill for imposing or increasing a tax or for borrowing, or declaring or increasing the expenditure charged on revenues, shall not be introduced in the Council of State. Such a Bill shall not be introduced except on the recommendation of the G-G. A Bill providing for the imposition of fines and penalties, or for demand of license fees is not a Money Bill for this purpose. A Bill which involves expenditure from the revenues of the Federation shall not be passed unless it is recommended for consideration by the Governor-General to the Chambers.

General Procedure:—The G-G. shall, in his discretion, make rules regulating the procedure in each Chamber after consulting the Speaker or the President in relation to the matters in which he has to act in his discretion or exercise his individual judgment, or for securing the timely completion of financial business, or for prohibiting discussion or interpellation on matters connected with any Indian State other than those for which the Federal Legislature can make laws for prohibiting discussion, except with the G-G's consent, of Foreign relations, conduct of Rulers of Indian States and Royal families, action of the G-G. relating to the affairs of a Province or administration of excluded and tribal areas other than for Budget Debate. Otherwise the chambers can make rules for their own procedure. The G-G. after consultation with the President and the Speaker may make rules relating to joint sittings and communications between the Chambers. The President of the Council shall preside at a joint sitting of the two chambers. The rules shall provide as to who must occupy the chair in the absence of the President at a joint sitting (S. 38). The proceedings in the Federal Legislature shall be conducted in the English language. If a member is not sufficiently acquainted with the English language, the rules may provide for his using another language. No discussion shall take place in the Federal Legislature about the conduct of any judge of the Federal Court or High Court (including High Courts in Federated States) in the discharge of his duties. The G.G. may, in his discretion, certify that the discussion of any Bill would affect the peace and tranquillity of India. On such certificate, further proceedings regarding the measure will be stopped. Courts have no jurisdiction to inquire into the regularity of the proceedings in the Legislature. (S. 41)

LEGISLATIVE POWERS OF THE GOVEROR-GENERAL.

Ordinances:— The Governor-General has power to issue ordinances when the Federal Legislature is not in session. He shall exercise his individual judgment if the measure would, under ordinary circumstances, have required his previous sanction before being introduced as a Bill. If it is of a nature, which, under ordinary circumstances, he would have reserved for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure thereon, then he shall not promulgate the ordinance on such a subject without instructions from His Majesty. An ordinance has the same effect as a Federal Act. But it shall have effect only for six weeks after the reassembling of the Legislature. If within that period resolutions disapproving of the ordinance are passed by both Houses of the Legislature, the ordinance will become inoperative after the second of the resolutions is passed. An ordinance may be disallowed by His Majesty or withdrawn by the G-G. An ordinance would be void if legislates on a subject beyond the legislative competency of the Federal Legislature. (S. 42)

The Governor-General may promulgate in his discretion ordinances for enabling him to discharge his functions in matters in which he is, under the Act, to act in his discretion or exercise his individual judgment. Ordinances of this nature shall be in operation for six months and may be extended for another six months. When such extension is given, it shall be communicated to the Secretary of State, who shall have it laid before Parliament. It shall be subject to disallowance by His Majesty, or may be withdrawn by the G-G (S. 43)

G-G's Acts:—Instead of issuing an ordinance under the last provision noted above, the G-G. may, after explaining the circumstances in a message to the Legislature, either enact a Governor-General's Act or attach to the message a draft Bill. One month after sending such draft, the G-G may enact the measure, taking into consideration any address presented to him by the Legislature. Such Acts shall be communicated to the Secretary of State to be laid before Parliament, and are subject to disallowance by His Majesty. These Acts can be enacted only for the purpose of enabling him satisfactorily to discharge his functions in which he has to act in his discretion, or exercise his individual judgment. A Governor-General's Act would be void if it legislates any provision which is beyond the legislative competency of the Federal Legislature. (S. 44)

SAFEGUARDS AGAINST FAILURE OF CONSTITUTIONAL MACHINERY.

When the Governor-General is satisfied that Government cannot be carried on under the Act, he may issue a Proclamation declaring his intention to act according to his discretion, and assume all, or any of the powers vested in any Federal body or authority except those of the Federal Court, and issue incidental and consequential provisions. The Proclamation may be varied or revoked later on, and shall be laid before Parliament by the Secretary of State to whom it shall be communicated. The Proclamation shall cease to operate after six months. If and so often as a resolution approving of the continuance of the Proclamation is passed by the Parliament, the Proclamation shall continue for a further period of twelve months. If, for a continuous period of three years, the Government has been carried on under such Proclamation, then it shall cease to have effect, and other provisions of the Act may be used with suitable amendments made by the Parliament for the government of the Federation. But this shall not extend the power of Parliament to make amendments in the Act without affecting the accession of a State. Laws passed by the Governor-General under the powers assumed by the Proclamation, shall, unless repealed earlier, have effect for two years after the date on which the Proclamation ceases to have force (S. 45).

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS.

Provinces :—The following are the Governors' Provinces:—Madras, Bombay, Bengal, U. P., the Punjab, Bihar, C. P. and Berar, Assam, N. W. F. Province, Orissa, Sind and such others as may be created. Burma shall cease to be part of India. The sovereignty of Berar is with H. E. H. the Nizam. But in contemplation of an agreement with H. E. H. the Nizam, Berar and C. P. will continue to be governed as one Governor's Province; except in the oath of allegiance, in all other matters, reference to British India shall be deemed to include Berar.

Governors:—The Governor of a Province is appointed by His Majesty by a Commission under the Royal Sign Manual. The third schedule prescribes that the salaries of the Governors of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, and the U. P. shall be Rs. 1,20,000 per annum; of the Punjab and Bihar Rs. 1,00,000 per annum; of the C. P. Rs. 72,000 per annum; and of Assam, N.W.F.P., Orissa and Sind Rs. 66,000 per annum. (The schedule provides for allowances for equipment and travelling, and during terms of office, for customs privileges &c., for the G.G. and the Governor).

Administration:—The Statutory provisions regarding a Council of Ministers and their tenure are the same as those of the Federal Council of Ministers. But there are no Reserved Subjects in the Provinces. The special responsibilities of the Governor are the same as those of the Governor-General except those of safe-guarding the financial stability and credit of the Federal Government, of preventing action relating to discriminatory or penal treatment (which is a federal subject), and of securing due administration of reserved subjects. In addition, the Governor has special responsibility for the securing of the execution of the orders of the Governor-General issued in his discretion. The Governor of Central Provinces and Berar has special responsibility for securing that a reasonable share of the revenues is spent for the benefit of Berar. A Governor of a Province has a special responsibility regarding administration of excluded areas, or of functions as Agent for the Governor-General. The Governor of Sind has a special responsibility regarding the Llyod Barrage and Canal schemes. The same provision as in the case of the Governor-General regarding the laying of the Instrument of Instructions is made in the case of the Governor also. There is similar provision for the Advocate-General of the Province, appointed by the Governor as in the case of the Advocate-General of India.

Special Provisions:— The Governor shall exercise his individual judgment in making, amending, and approving by virtue of powers vested in him, regulations and orders relating to the police other than those affecting the organisation and discipline of that force. (S. 56) If it appears to the Governor that the peace or tranquillity is threatened by attempt of conspiracy to overthrow the Government, the Governor may direct that his functions shall, to that extent, be exercised in his discretion. During such a period, when he is acting in his discretion, the Governor may authorise an official to speak and take part in the Legislature. The Governor may make rules that no records or (S. 57) information relating to the sources of information regarding conspiracy or preparation shall be disclosed (1) by a member of the Police to another member of the Police except under the directions of the Commissioner or I. G. P., or to any other person except under directions of the Governor, (2) by any other official to any person except in accordance with the Governor's directions. The provisions relating to conduct of business in the Province are the same as those for the Federal Government, and the Governor can act in the same manner as the Governor-General.

The Provincial Legislature:—The Provinces of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, United Provinces, Bihar, and Assam shall have two Chambers, and the other Provinces one. The legislative procedure, constitution of the legislatures, the legislative powers of the Governor, and the provisions in the case of failure of the constitutional machinery in the Province, are similar to those noted above in respect of the Federation. No Proclamation under the last of these items can be issued by the Governor without the concurrence of the Governor-General.

Excluded Areas :—Specified areas may be excluded, either partly or wholly, from the operation of the Act or part thereof, for which the Governor may make Regulations. The Regulations will not have legal force unless assented to by the Governor-General.

Chief Commissioner's Provinces :—These shall be administered by the G.-G. through a Chief Commissioner. These Provinces are British Baluchistan, Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara, Coorg, the Andamans and Nicobar Islands, and Pant Piploda. Aden shall cease to be a part of India.

LEGISLATIVE POWERS.

Jurisdiction :—The Federal Legislature may make laws for British India and Federated States, subject to the Act and the Instrument of Accession. The extra-territorial operation of any Federal Law, shall not be ground for invalidating that Law in so far as it relates to British subjects and servants of the Crown in India, to British subjects of Indian domicile wherever they may be, or to persons on ships or air-craft registered in British India or Federated States, or to subjects of Federated States in matters included by the Instrument of Accession. This includes laws for the regulation and discipline of Naval,

Military, and Air Forces raised in British India, to persons attached thereto wherever they may be. (S. 99)

Legislative Lists :—The Federal Legislature has exclusive jurisdiction to make laws relating to matters enumerated in the Federal Legislative List (vide the seventh Schedule).

The Federal Legislature, and a Provincial Legislature also, have power to make laws relating to matters enumerated in the Concurrent Legislative List.

The Provincial Legislature has exclusive jurisdiction to make laws for a Province with respect to any of the matters enumerated in the Provincial Legislative List.

The Federal Legislature has power to make laws with respect to matters enumerated in the Provincial Legislative List except for a Province or any part thereof. (S. 100) The Instrument of Accession will govern the competency of the Federal Legislature in legislating for States. (S. 101)

Emergency Legislation:— The Federal Legislature, may, however, exercise legislative powers with the previous sanction of the Governor-General, for Bills even in respect of a Province, if the Governor-General has in his discretion, declared by Proclamation that a grave emergency exists threatening the security of India, whether by War or internal disturbance. This power, however, lasts only while the emergency lasts, and laws enacted by the Federal Legislature in exercise of this power shall cease to have effect on expiry of six months after the Proclamation has ceased to operate. If any provision of a Provincial Law, which the Provincial Legislature has power to make, is repugnant to any provision of a Federal Law, which the Federal Legislature has, under this emergency, power to make, the Federal Law will prevail whether passed before or after the Provincial Law, but the Provincial Law will be void only so long as the Federal Law continues to have effect. The Proclamation shall be forthwith communicated to the Secretary of State who shall lay it before each House of Parliament and shall have operation only for six months unless approved by Parliament before the expiration of that period. (S. 102)

The Federal Legislature has got power to legislate for two or more Provinces if they consent. In such cases, the Provincial Legislatures have got power to amend or repeal such Act if it does not suit them.

The Governor-General in his discretion has got residuary powers for empowering the Federal or Provincial Legislature to enact a Law regarding any subject^{not} in the lists (vide Schedule), or to impose any tax which the Federal or Provincial Executive shall extend to the administration of the area under them.

The Federal Legislature may make the Naval Discipline Act applicable to Indian Naval Forces with suitable modifications if necessary. The Naval Discipline Act shall, without modification, apply to any part of the Indian Navy deputed to be under the Admiralty.

The Federal Legislature can legislate in matters giving effect to International agreements only with the consent of the Governor or Ruler of a State as may be, if the Law is to affect a Province or a State. (S. 106)

In the case of inconsistency between Federal Laws and Provincial Laws, the Federal Laws shall prevail. (Section 107).

Restrictions on Legislative Powers :—The previous sanction of the Governor-General is required for introducing Bills in the Federal Legislature and also in the Provincial Legislatures on some matters, e. g., repealing or amending Acts of Parliament, Governor or Governor-General's Act, affecting criminal proceedings against European residents etc. (Section 108). The power of the Parliament to legislate for British India remains unaffected, and the Federal and Provincial Legislatures cannot pass Laws affecting the Sovereignty of the Crown, Succession to the Crown, Army Act, Air Force Act, Naval Discipline Act, Prize-Courts, Orders-in-Council, etc., (Section 110).

Provision regarding Discrimination:—A British subject domiciled in the United Kingdom is exempt from the operation of Federal or Provincial Law imposing any restriction of right of entry into British India or any disability regarding travel, residence, holding of property etc. by reference to place of birth, race, or descent. But this exemption does not prevail where a similar disability is imposed on Indians by the law of the United Kingdom. Quarantine regulations are not discriminatory regulations for this purpose, nor are rules governing deportation of undesirable persons. The Governor-General or Governor may suspend the provision against discriminations in view of grave menace to tranquillity, or to combat crimes of violence.

THE NEW CONSTITUTION

Discriminations in taxation against British subjects domiciled in, or against companies incorporated in, the United Kingdom or Burma, or against ships registered in British India, or against air-craft, are forbidden. British Companies will be treated on the same lines as Indian companies in the matter of subsides, bounties, &c. These are, however, subject to reciprocity by the laws of the United Kingdom. This exemption may be taken away after a Convention between the Government in the United Kingdom and the Federal Government meets after the establishment of the Federation, and settles on similarity of treatments to British subjects domiciled in India, and to Companies incorporated there, and after the necessary legislation is passed thereon. The previous sanction of the Governor-General or Governor is necessary, for Federal or Provincial legislation respectively, providing for the laying down of professional qualifications for the exercise of professions or for imposing any disability or restriction in connection therewith. Such Bills should be reserved for Royal Assent or the Governor-General's consideration as the case may be. Such previous sanction shall not be given if it affects persons who were already lawfully practising a profession, except when public interests require any special debarring. Such regulations shall be published at least four months before they are expressed to come into operation. If within two months after the publication thereof, complaint is made that the regulations will operate unfairly against any class of persons, and if the Governor-General or the Governor, to whom the complaint is made considers it to be well-founded, the Governor-General or Governor, may, by public notification, disallow the regulations.

Medical Qualifications:—A British subject domiciled in the United Kingdom or India, who is, or is entitled to be, registered in the United Kingdom by virtue of a diploma granted in the United Kingdom, shall not be excluded from practising medicine, surgery or mid-wifery by any Federal or Provincial law except on the ground that the diploma does not furnish sufficient guarantee of his possessing the requisite knowledge for such practice. He shall not be so excluded unless the law provides that no proposal for such exclusion shall be operative until the expiration of twelve months after notice of the G-G. to the University or body granting the diploma, and further provides that the proposal shall be inoperative if the Privy Council, on enquiry, decides that the diploma furnishes a sufficient guarantee of knowledge. For this purpose, if the University or body granting the diploma, or any British subject holding the diploma, feels aggrieved by a proposal for exclusion, such body or person may apply to the Privy Council, which, after giving an opportunity to the necessary parties in British India and the United Kingdom to tender evidence and written representations, shall determine whether the diploma is a sufficient guarantee for possession of knowledge and skill for medical practice.

The aforesaid provision in the previous paragraph is subject to the condition that British subjects domiciled in India holding a medical diploma granted after examination in British India, shall not be excluded from practice and registration in the United Kingdom except on the ground that the diploma is not a sufficient guarantee of possession of knowledge and skill; the provision is also subject to the further condition that there shall be a reference to the Privy Council for deciding about the sufficiency of the diploma in such cases.

A medical practitioner entitled to practise in British India by virtue of a diploma granted in the United Kingdom, or by virtue of a diploma granted in British India, shall not be subjected to disability or restrictions to which persons entitled to practise by virtue of diplomas granted in the other country are not subject.

This shall not affect the power of any authority in the United Kingdom or in British India to suspend or debar a practitioner on the ground of misconduct. 'Diploma' includes any certificate, degree, or fellowship granted to persons passing examinations.

ADMINISTRATIVE RELATIONS BETWEEN THE FEDERATION, PROVINCES, AND STATES.

Administration:—The executive authority of every Province and Federal State shall be so exercised as to secure respect for Federal laws applicable to the Province or State. Regard shall be had to the interests of the Province or State in the exercise of the authority of the Federation (S. 122). The Governor-General shall require the Governors to discharge certain functions as his Agents in relation to defence, ecclesiastical affairs, external affairs and tribal areas. The Governor-General may entrust functions relating to Federal matters to Provincial Government or the Ruler of a Federated State with their consent. A Federal law may confer powers and impose duties on the officers of the Provincial Government or the Federated State. The Federation shall pay the costs for such functions. If the parties do not agree as to the costs, an arbitrator appointed by the Chief Justice may decide the amount of such extra costs (S. 124). With respect to the administration of Federal laws in States, agreements may be made with the Rulers of Federated States, and shall be so made if so provided by the Instrument of Accession, in which, provision shall also be made for inspection, if necessary, regarding the administration of such laws and for the issue of directions by the G-G (S. 125). The executive authority of a Province shall not impede the exercise of Federal executive authority which can give necessary directions to a Province among others for the carrying into execution of the Federal laws relating to matters specified in the Concurrent Legislative List. A Bill relating thereto shall not be introduced in the Federal Legislature without the previous consent of the Governor-General. Directions shall be given for the construction and maintenance of communications of military importance. The Federation had full power regarding construction and maintenance of communications of strategic importance. If the Governor-General thinks that effect has not been given to his directions, he may issue further directions. The Governor-General may also issue orders to Governors as to the manner of the exercise of executive authority for preventing grave menace to the peace or tranquillity of any part of India. The Federation may ask the Province to transfer land or to acquire land for the Federation on the Federation paying the expenses. Disputes as to the terms of transfer may be settled by an arbitrator appointed by the Chief Justice of India. The Federated State shall exercise its executive authority so as not to impede the Federal authority exercisable in a State. Failure to fulfil such obligations may be met by the issue of fresh directions by the Governor-General to the State on considering the Ruler's representations, if any. Differences as to the exercisability of a Federal law in a State, shall be settled by the Federal Court (S. 128).

Broadcasting:—The Federation shall not unreasonably refuse to entrust a Province or Federated State with functions regarding the construction and use of transmitters and levying fees therefor. But the Province or State cannot interfere with Federal control over constructions made by the Federation. The Federation cannot impose conditions relating to the matter broadcast by a Province or Ruler, except that the Governor-General can interfere to prevent grave meance to peace or tranquillity after the due administration of Reserved Subjects, tribal areas and for the exercise of his special responsibilities. The G.-G. shall decide disputes between the Federal Government and the Provinces and States regarding broadcasting.

Interference with Water Supplies:—The Province or Ruler of a State may complain to the Governor-General as to the interference with water supplies by another Province or State. The Governor-General shall appoint a Commission who shall report after inquiry. The G.-G. shall announce the decision after the consideration of the Report. Before such decision is given, the Province or State may request the G-G to refer the matter to His Majesty in Council for decision. No law shall be passed repugnant to the decision of the G-G or His Majesty, as the case may be. The decision shall be duly given effect to. Expenses may also be decreed, and they may be enforced like an order of the Federal Court. Similar provisions may apply in the case of interference with water supplies of Chief

Commissioner's Provinces. The jurisdiction of Courts in these matters is excluded. The Ruler of a Federated State may exclude, by the Instrument of Accession, the application of the provisions regarding interference with water supply in relation to his State. (S. 134)

Inter-Provincial Co-operation:—His Majesty may, on representation from the Governor-General, establish an Inter-Provincial Council with facilities for the States to participate in the work, for settling inter-Provincial disputes, for investigating subjects of common interest and making recommendations for better coordination of policy and action in relation thereto.

FINANCE, PROPERTY, CONTRACTS AND SUITS.

Finance:—Distribution of Revenue between the Federation and Federal Units:—

The Federation shall levy and collect duties in respect of succession to property other than agricultural land, Stamp duties mentioned in the Federal Legislative List, terminal taxes on goods or passengers carried by Railway or air, and taxes on Railway fares and freights. The net proceeds except proceeds attributable to Chief Commissioners' Provinces, shall be assigned and distributed among the Provinces and States. (S. 137) Taxes on income shall be levied and collected by the Federation; and a prescribed part of the net proceeds except those attributable to Chief Commissioners' Provinces or in respect of Federal emoluments, shall not form part of the Federal revenues, but shall be assigned and distributed among the Provinces and the Federated States. The percentage originally fixed shall be continued. The Federal Legislature may levy a

THE NEW CONSTITUTION.

a surcharge for being available for the Federal revenues. Out of the moneys assigned by the Province, the Federation may retain in each year of a prescribed period a certain sum prescribed, and in each year of a further prescribed period a reduced amount at making a sliding reduction in each year that the amount to be retained in the last year of the period may be equal to the amount of each such annual reduction. The periods shall not be reduced by order in Council. The Governor-General may, in consultation with the Representatives of the Federal, Provincial and State interests, extend the duration of the second prescribed period to enable the Federation to retain in any year the same amount as in the previous year during that second period, i. e. without the reduction according to the sliding scale. When surcharge is imposed by the Federal Legislature, States in which income-tax is not levied, shall pay a contribution to the Federation equal to the net proceeds which would have accrued if the surcharge were leviable in the State. Federal emoluments mean emoluments and pensions payable by the Federation or the Federal Railway Authority on which income-tax is chargeable. (S 138)

Corporation tax shall not be levied by the Federation in any Federated State until ten years have elapsed after the establishment of Federation. Any Federal law for the levy of corporation tax shall make provision enabling the Ruler of any Federated State to have the option of paying the contribution to the Federal revenues in lieu of the Corporation tax if he his unwilling to levy the tax in the State. The contribution shall be equal to the net proceeds which would have accrued if the tax was levied.

The Ruler shall requisition information to be supplied to the Auditor-General to enable him to determine the amount of contribution. The Ruler may appeal to the Federal Court if dissatisfied with the amount of contribution in any financial year. The decision of the Federal Court shall be final i.e. non-appealable. (S. 139) Salt duties, excise duties and export duties shall be levied and collected by the Federation. The Federal Act may provide for the distribution to Provinces or States to which the Act imposing the duty extends, sums equivalent to the whole or any part of the net proceeds of that duty on principles formulated in that Act. One-half or greater proportion, as His Majesty in Council may determine, of the net proceeds of export duty on jute or jute products shall be assigned to jute-growing Provinces or Federated States in proportion to the amounts of jute grown therein. (S. 141) The previous sanction of the Governor-General is required for Bills affecting taxation in which the Provinces are interested, or affecting the provisions and principles of distribution between the Provinces and States, or varying the meaning of the expression "Agricultural Income". Before giving sanction, the G.-G. shall also consider other avenues of taxation if any, and the remedies for balancing the Federal Budget. (S. 141) His Majesty in Council may fix subventions from the Federal Revenues to the Provinces. Except in the case of the North-West Frontier Province, the amount of subvention shall not be increased by a subsequent order unless an address for increase is presented by the Federal Legislature to the Governor-General for submission to His Majesty. The duties or taxes levied in any Federated State independently of the provision of the Federal Legislature, will not be subject to any of the aforesaid provisions. Any taxes, cesses or fees levied by any Provincial Government, Municipality or any other local body under the laws existing on or before the 1st January 1935, will continue to operate until provision to the contrary is made by the Federation. Net proceeds means proceeds minus the cost of collection as ascertained by the Auditor-General of India, and his decision will be final. An Act of the Legislature assigning proceeds or contributions, may provide for the manner of calculation for financial adjustments and for the ancillary and incidental matters.

The Crown and the States :—The Federation shall pay the expenses of the Crown in connection with the functions of the Crown in its relations with the Indian States including the making of payments of customary allowances to members of the family or servants of any former Ruler of any territories in India. All cash contributions and payments in respect of loans from any Indian State shall be received by His Majesty and may be placed by His Majesty at the disposal of the Federation. Nothing shall derogate from His Majesty's rights to remit wholly or in part any contributions or payments. His Majesty may agree to remit any contributions of a Federated State over a period not exceeding twenty years from the date of Accession. But the remission shall not take effect until the Provinces have begun to receive monies from taxes on income. Remission shall be complete before the expiration of twenty years from the date of Accession of that State or before the expiration of the second prescribed period mentioned above in relation to distribution of taxes on income, whichever occurs first. In the case of a voluntary cession of a territory before the passing of the Act by a Federated State, in return for specific military guarantees or in return for discharge from obligations to provide military assistance to the Crown, His Majesty may direct the payment of reasonable sums after taking into account the value of any privilege or immunity to that State, subject to its waiving the said guarantees. No contribution shall be remitted save in so far as it exceeds the value of any privileges or immunity enjoyed by the State. If the liability for contributions has been discharged by payment of capital sums, they may be returned in instalments or otherwise, as His Majesty may direct. Such repayments shall be deemed to be remissions. Cash contribution includes periodical contributions in acknowledgment of the Sovereignty of His Majesty in return for aid or protection, contributions in commutation of an obligation to provide military assistance, or in return for special military forces or police, or expenses of an agent, periodical contributions on restoration of a State or a territory, and periodical contributions formerly payable to another State but now payable to His Majesty by right of conquest, assignment or lapse. Privilege or immunity refers to rights of levying sea customs, production and sale of untaxed salt, sums receivable on account of a surrender of a right of customs duties, and of production of salt and other commodities or in lieu of grants of free salt; it further includes the annual value to the Ruler of any privilege or territory granted in respect of any such right. Privileges in respect of free service stamps, free carriage of State mails, right to issue currency notes, right to get freedom from customs duties on goods imported by sea and transported in bond to the State, also come under this category. For the acceptance by His Majesty of the Instrument of Accession of any State, all particulars as regards privileges or immunity will have to be given in the Instrument (Vide Section 147). Section 148 provides that any payments made under Section 147 and payments made heretofore to any State by the G.G. in council or the Local Government shall be charged on the revenues of the Federation or on the revenues of the corresponding Province as the case may be. The value of privileges and immunities will be set off against the share of taxes etc., assigned to Federated States.

MISCELLANEOUS FINANCIAL PROVISIONS.

No burden shall be imposed on the revenue of the Federation or the Provinces except for the purposes of India. The Federation or a Province may make grants for a purpose though it is not within the Legislative competence of the Federal or Provincial Legislature. The Governor-General or the Governor exercising his individual judgment may make rules for the revenues of the Federation or of the Province respectively being paid to the public account, and for custody and withdrawals thereof. The Governor-General shall exercise his discretion in the appointment, removal, approval, and fixing of salaries and tenure of office of the Governor, Deputy Governor and officiating Governor of the Reserve Bank, and while acting in supersession of the Central Board of the Bank and in the liquidation of the Bank. The Governor-General will exercise his individual judgment in nominating and removing the Directors of the Reserve Bank. The previous sanction of the Governor-General acting in his discretion will be necessary for Bills affecting the constitution or functions of the Bank or its powers of coinage and currency. Property vested in His Majesty for the purpose of the Federation can be exempt from all taxes imposed by a State or a Province. But if the said property was subject to any tax before the Act, it will continue to be so until a contrary measure is passed. The Government of a Province and the Ruler of a Federated State shall be free from Federal taxation with respect to lands and buildings situated in British India or income accruing or received in British India. The trade or business and incomes therefrom of any Province or a Federated State outside their territorial jurisdiction, shall not be exempt from Federal taxation nor the personal property of any Ruler including personal income and lands and buildings. The right of the Ruler of any State with respect to exemption from taxation in the matter of Government securities shall be preserved if the right existed before or at the commencement of this Act. The expenses of any Court or Commission, or any pension payable for Indian services under the Crown, shall be adjusted after a consideration of the proportion of the services rendered to the Province or the Federation; and the contribution of each shall be charged on the respective revenues. In default of agreement regarding the contribution, an arbitrator appointed by the Chief Justice of India shall decide the issue. The Secretary of State shall get money from time to time from the Federation and the Provinces to pay off his liabilities and pensions payable in the United Kingdom on behalf of the Federation or the Provinces. His Majesty in Councill may make provision for regulating the relations of the monetary systems of Burma and India, and for granting relief from any Federal tax on income, in respect of income taxed or taxable in Burma. Provision may be made by His Majesty by Order in Council regarding customs duties on Indo-Burma trade and for safe-guarding the economic interests of Burma during the period immediately after separation from India.

Borrowing:— The powers of borrowing vested in the Secretary of State in Council shall cease from the introduction of Provincial Autonomy. But this does not affect the powers, under the Act, of the Secretary of State for raising Sterling Loans. Both the Federation and the Provinces have borrowing powers within limits fixed by the Federal Legislature and the Provincial Legislature respectively. The Federation may make loans to the Provinces and may give guarantee for Provincial Loans. A Province may not borrow outside India without the consent of the Federation. A Province may not borrow without such consent if there is still any outstanding in the loan due to the Federation, if any, or under any guarantee given on its behalf by the Federation. Consent, guarantee and loan shall not be unreasonably refused or withheld by the Federation. The G-G's decision in disputes relating thereto shall be final. Within the limits fixed by the Act, the Federation may give loans to, or guarantee loans raised by, any Federated State. Provision is made for the application of the Colonial Stock Acts 1877-1900 to the Stocks issued by the Federation.

Audit And Accounts:— There shall be an Auditor-General of India appointed by His Majesty. He shall be removed from office on the same grounds and in like manner as a Federal Court Judge (See later under the heading "The Judicature"). He is ineligible for any further office under the Crown in India. He shall act according to the rules of the order in Council and the modifications thereof made by the Legislature. A Bill regarding the same shall not be introduced without the previous sanction of the Governor-General. Provision is made for the appointment of Provincial Auditors-General if after two years from the introduction of Provincial Autonomy, the Provincial Legislature passes an Act for such appointment. A Provincial Auditor-General is eligible for appointment as Auditor-General of India, but not for any other office. Power is given to the Auditor-General of India to give directions as to the keeping of Federal and Provincial accounts which shall be duly given effect to. If used for purposes which thereafter will be Federal, or for the exercise of functions in relation to State purposes, or intended to be so used, the property will vest in the Crown for the Federation or for the State relations respectively. The property outside India vests in the Crown for the Federation. If the property is used for the Department of the Secretary of State in Council, then it vests in His Majesty's Government and is to be under the management of the Commissioner for Works; and the sale of such lands shall take place only with the consent of the Governor-General. All other property shall vest in His Majesty for the Federation, or for the exercise of functions in relation to States, or for the Government of a Province according to the respective purposes for which the property was held before the introduction of Provincial Autonomy. The authority of the Federation in the Province shall extend to the sale, grant, disposition, acquisition, and purchase of property and the making of contracts. But the official residence of the Governor-General or the Governor cannot be sold or changed except with the concurrence of the Governor-General or the Governor respectively. Property acquired for the Federation, or for a Province, or for the exercise of functions in relation to States, shall vest in His Majesty for those purposes. Neither the G-G nor the Governor, nor the Secretary of State, nor any officer executing or making contracts on behalf of Government shall thereby incur any personal liability.

In the Federal Assembly, three seats not allotted to any Provinces shall be filled up by the representatives of Commerce and Industries, chosen by Chambers of Commerce etc. and one by a representative of labour chosen by labour organisation. The Hindu, Muhammadan and Sikh seats will be filled by the representatives of those communities in the Provincial Assemblies voting separately for a prescribed number of communal seats. Seats allocated to Europeans, Anglo-Indians, Indian Christians and women are to be filled by the representatives of these groups in the Provincial Assemblies voting in ad hoc electoral colleges. In the case of a seat allotted to a Province which is to be filled by a landholder, it shall be filled by landholders voting in territorial constituencies.

States' Representatives:—The Rulers of States constituting a group of States to which a seat is allotted in the Council of State, shall in rotation, appoint a person to fill that seat. The Rulers of States constituting a group of States to which a seat is allotted in the Federal Assembly, shall appoint jointly a person to fill that seat. With the approval of the Governor-General, such Rulers, may, by agreement, appoint jointly a person to fill a seat in the Council of State instead of by rotation (See extract from Schedule for duration of membership).

THE NEW CONSTITUTION (Contd.)

Regarding the establishment of Federation on the Accession of a certain number of States, it is provided as follows:—

1. If the Rulers of at least one-half of the States included in any group to which one seat in the Council of State is allotted, accede to the Federation, they shall be deemed as being entitled to choose one member.

2. If, of the Rulers of States included in the groups to be formed out of the States comprised in Division XVII of the Table of Seats, sufficient accede to the Federation to entitle them to appoint one member or two members of the Federal Assembly, the Rulers so acceding shall be reckoned as being entitled together to choose one member of the Council of State and, if sufficient accede to entitle them to appoint three or more members of the Federal Assembly, the Rulers so acceding shall be reckoned as being entitled together to choose two members of the Council of State; and

3. The Population of a State shall be taken to be the population attributed thereto in column five of the Table of Seats or, if it is one of the States comprised in the said Division XVII of the Table, such figure as the Governor-General may in his discretion determine, and the total population of the State shall be the total stated at the end of the Table.

The second Schedule gives the provisions of the Act which may be amended without affecting the Accession of a State. The third Schedule prescribes the salaries and allowances of the Governor-General and the Governors. The fourth Schedule gives the forms of Oath or affirmation.

THE INDIAN CONSTITUTION

The subject of the Ruler of an Indian State appointed to the Legislature has to swear that "saving the faith and allegiance which I owe the Ruler of the.....State, his heirs and successors, I will be faithful etc., etc, to His Majesty the King-Emperor of India."

Provincial Legislatures:—The fifth Schedule deals with the composition of the Provincial Legislatures. The age-limit for members is the same as in the case of the Federal Council and Assembly respectively; and the scheme for election or representation is by territorial constituencies for the Provincial Assemblies. For reservation of seats for members of the scheduled castes and for the seven seats for the Marathas in Bombay, the scheme shall be such that in each constituency there shall be at least one unreserved seat. For seats reserved for scheduled castes, all members of the caste entitled to vote in that constituency shall take part in a primary election held for electing four candidates for each such reserved seat, and no member not so elected as a candidate at such an election shall be qualified to hold that reserve seat, or any other seat if so prescribed. Women shall be chosen according to territorial constituencies or special constituencies for electing women members.

For election to the Legislative Councils also there may be territorial constituencies for filling up General seats, Mohammedan Seats, European Seats, Indian Christian Seats and so on.

Franchise:—The sixth Schedule deals with Franchise. Nobody can be a voter unless he is a British Subject or Ruler or Subject of a Federated State or the Ruler or Subject of any other Indian State under conditions that may .

be prescribed. He must not be of unsound mind or declared to be so by a competent Court. In a Sikh, Mohammedan, Anglo-Indian or Indian Christian constituency, the voter must belong to the respective community. Such voters shall not vote in the General constituency.

Except in Provinces where constituencies have been specially formed for electing women members—in which case a person can vote in the General constituency and in the particular Women members constituency as may be prescribed by the rules—no voter shall vote in more than one territorial constituency. A person shall not be included as a voter if he is disqualified on account of corrupt practices at elections or other election offences. Property held in a fiduciary capacity shall be left out of account in calculating the total property for acquiring the qualification of a voter. The Schedule then gives the special qualifications in each of the Provinces.

The seventh Schedule gives the Legislative Lists (See extracts from Schedules below).

Federal Railway Authority :—The eighth Schedule deals with the Federal Railway Authority. It shall consist of seven persons appointed by the Governor-General. To be a member, a person should have had experience in Commerce, Industry, Agriculture, Finance or Administration or should be or should have been within twelve months last preceding, a member of the Federal or any Provincial Legislature or in the service of the Crown in India or a Railway official in India. Of the first members three shall be appointed for three years at the expiration of which they are eligible for reappointment for a further term of three years or five years. In other cases, the term shall be for five years with the eligibility for appointment for another five years. Matters coming up before the Authority shall be decided by a majority of the members present. The person presiding shall have a second or casting vote in the case of equality of votes. Any person concerned in any Railway contract shall not take part in a discussion of that subject and shall make a full disclosure of all the facts. At any meeting persons deputed by the Governor-General to represent him may attend and speak but not vote. The Head of the Executive Staff of the Authority shall be a Chief Railway Commissioner who shall be experienced in Railway administration. He shall be appointed by the Governor-General exercising his individual judgment after consultation with the Authority. The Chief Commissioner shall be assisted by a Financial Commissioner appointed by the Governor-General and by Additional Commissioners with experience in Railway administration appointed by the Authority on the recommendation of the Chief Railway Commissioner. The Chief Commissioner shall not be removed from office except by the Authority with the approval of the Governor-General. The Financial Commissioner shall not be removed from office except by the G-G. The Chief Commissioner and the Financial Commissioner have the right to attend meetings of the Authority. The Financial Commissioner may require any matter relating to finance to be referred to the Authority. The Authority shall not be liable to pay Indian income-tax or super-tax on its income, profits or gains. The Reserve Bank of India shall be entrusted with all the moneys of the Authority on the same lines as the Bankers for all the transactions of the Authority and on the same lines as the Bank holds moneys of the Federal Government.

THE NEW CONSTITUTION (Contd.)

The ninth Schedule gives the Sections of the Government of India Act 1919 which are continued in force with amendments until the establishment of the Federation. They are Sections 36-43 dealing with the members of the Governor-General's Executive Council and meetings; Sections 63, 63-A, 63-B, 63-C, 63-D, 63-E, 64, 67, 67-A, 67-B, 68, 69, & 72 dealing with the composition and functions of the Indian Legislature and the assent of the G-G to Bills, power of the Crown to disallow Acts and the power to make Ordinances in case of emergency; Sections 85, 86, 87, 89, 92, 93 dealing with salaries, allowances, leave of absence, vacation of office, temporary or acting appointments of the Governor-General and members of the Executive Council; and Section 129-A which is supplemental providing for the making of rules under the Act.

The tenth Schedule contains the List of enactments repealed. It is stated that the extent of the repeal of the Government of India Act 1919 relates to the whole Act except the Preamble and sub-section 1 of Section 47.

CHAPTER VI*

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

PART I.

INTRODUCTORY.

1. Short title.

2. Government of India by the Crown:—(1) All rights, authority and jurisdiction heretofore belonging to His Majesty the King, Emperor of India, which appertain or are incidental to the government of the territories in India for the time being vested in him, and all rights, authority and jurisdiction exercisable by him in or in relation to any other territories in India, are exercisable by His Majesty, except in so far as may be otherwise provided by or under this Act, or as may be otherwise directed by His Majesty.

Provided that any powers connected with the exercise of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States shall in India, if not exercised by His Majesty, be exercised only by, or by persons acting under the authority of, His Majesty's Representative for the exercise of those functions of the Crown.

* Only the more important Sections of the Act are reprinted in extenso. To several of them explanatory notes are also given. In other cases, only the number and headings of Sections are printed to facilitate reference. Students would do well to consult the summary given for the corresponding portions in previous chapters.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

(2) The said rights, authority and jurisdiction shall include any rights, authority or jurisdiction heretofore exercisable in or in relation to any territories in India by the Secretary of State, the Secretary of State in Council, the Governor-General, the Governor-General in Council, any Governor or any Local Government, whether by delegation from His Majesty or otherwise.

NOTES :— Regarding the legal basis of the new Constitution, the J. P. C. Report stated :—

“ We apprehend, therefore, that the legal basis of a reconstituted Government of India must be, first, the resumption into the hands of the Crown of all rights, authority, and jurisdiction in and over the territories of British India, whether they are at present vested in the Secretary of State, the Governor-General in Council, or in the Provincial Governments and Administrations; and second their redistribution in such manner as the Act may prescribe.....(Paragraph 153).

But the Crown also possesses rights, authority and jurisdiction elsewhere in India, including those rights which are comprehended under the name of Paramountcy. All these are at present exercised on behalf of the Crown, under the general control of the Secretary of State, by the Governor-General in Council, and it will be necessary that they should also be resumed in their entirety into the hands of the Crown..... Outside the federal sphere, the States' relations will be exclusively with the Crown.....the right to tender advice to the Crown in this regard will lie with His Majesty's Government.” (Paragraph 158).

(See the White Paper (Paragraph 9), and notes to S. 285 below).

The proviso to Section 2 (1) is new and did not find a place in the Bill. Sir Samuel Hoare in his Memorandum stated:—"It is not intended that special powers in relation to the State should, if not exercised by His Majesty himself, be delegated to any other authority than the Viceroy as the Crown's representative, and an amendment to make this plain will be considered." The proviso was accordingly inserted.

3. The Governor-General of India and His Majesty's Representative as regards relations with Indian States:—(1) The Governor-General of India is appointed by His Majesty by a Commission under the Royal Sign Manual and has—

- (a) all such powers and duties as are conferred or imposed on him by or under this Act; and
- (b) such other powers of His Majesty, not being powers connected with the exercise of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States, as His Majesty may be pleased to assign to him.

(2) His Majesty's Representative for the exercise of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States is appointed by His Majesty in like manner and has such powers and duties in connection with the exercise of those functions (not being powers or duties conferred or imposed by or under this Act on the Governor-General) as His Majesty may be pleased to assign to him.

(3) It shall be lawful for His Majesty to appoint one person to fill both the said offices.

4. The Commander-in-Chief in India:—There shall be a Commander-in-Chief of His Majesty's Forces in India appointed by Warrant under the Royal Sign Manual.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

Notes:-The J. P. C. Report stated:- "Although the executive authority of the Federation vested in the Governor-General as the King's representative includes the superintendence, direction and control of the Military Government, the command of the Forces in India will be exercised by a Commander-in-Chief to be appointed by His Majesty."

PART II.

THE FEDERATION OF INDIA.

CHAPTER I.

Establishment of Federation and Accession of Indian States.

5. Proclamation of Federation of India:—(1) It shall be lawful for His Majesty, if an address in that behalf has been presented to him by each House of Parliament and if the condition hereinafter mentioned is satisfied, to declare by Proclamation that as from the day therein appointed there shall be united in a Federation under the Crown, by the name of the Federation of India,—

- (a) the Provinces hereinafter called Governors' Provinces; and
- (b) the Indian States which have acceded or may thereafter accede to the Federation; and in the Federation so established there shall be included the Provinces hereinafter called Chief-Commissioners' Provinces.

(2) The condition referred to is that States—

- (a) the Rulers whereof will, in accordance with the provisions contained in Part II of the First Schedule to this Act, be entitled to choose not less than fifty-two members of the Council of State; and

- (b) the aggregate population whereof, as ascertained in accordance with the said provisions, amounts to at least one-half of the total population of the States as so ascertained, have acceded to the Federation.

Notes:—See summary of Schedule 1 (page 109) regarding the computation of the number of members under sub-section 2 (a).

6. Accession of Indian States:—(1) A State shall be deemed to have acceded to the Federation if His Majesty has signified his acceptance of an Instrument of Accession executed by the Ruler thereof, whereby the Ruler for himself, his heirs and successors—

- (a) declares that he accedes to the Federation as established under this Act, with the intent that His Majesty the King, the Governor-General of India, the Federal Legislature, the Federal Court and any other Federal authority established for the purposes of the Federation shall, by virtue of his Instrument of Accession, but subject always to the terms thereof, and for the purposes only of the Federation, exercise in relation to his State such functions as may be vested in them by or under this Act; and
- (b) assumes the obligation of ensuring that due effect is given within his State to the provisions of this Act so far as they are applicable therein by virtue of his Instrument of Accession;

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

Provided that an Instrument of Accession may be executed conditionally on the establishment of the Federation on or before a specified date, and in that case the State shall not be deemed to have acceded to the Federation if the Federation is not established until after that date.

(2) An Instrument of Accession shall specify the matters which the Ruler accepts as matters with respect to which the Federal Legislature may make laws for his State, and the limitations, if any, to which the power of the Federal Legislature to make laws for his State, and the exercise of the executive authority of the Federation in his State, are respectively to be subject.

(3) A Ruler may, by a supplementary Instrument executed by him and accepted by His Majesty, vary the Instrument of Accession of his State by extending the functions which by virtue of that Instrument are exercisable by His Majesty or any Federal Authority in relation to his State.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring His Majesty to accept any Instrument of Accession or supplementary Instrument unless he considers it proper so to do, or as empowering His Majesty to accept any such Instrument if it appears to him that the terms thereof are inconsistent with the scheme of Federation embodied in this Act:

Provided that after the establishment of the Federation, if any Instrument has in fact been accepted by His Majesty, the validity of that Instrument or of any of its provisions shall not be called in question and the provisions of this Act shall, in relation to the State, have effect subject to the provisions of the Instrument.

(5) It shall be a term of every Instrument of Accession that the provisions of this Act mentioned in the Second Schedule thereto may, without affecting the accession of the State, be amended by or by authority of Parliament, but no such amendment shall, unless it is accepted by the Ruler in a supplementary Instrument, be construed as extending the functions which by virtue of the Instrument are exercisable by His Majesty or any Federal authority in relation to the State.

(6) An Instrument of Accession or supplementary Instrument shall not be valid unless it is executed by the Ruler himself, but, subject as aforesaid, references in this Act to the Ruler of a State include references to any persons for the time being exercising the powers of the Ruler of the State, whether by reason of the Ruler's minority or for any other reason.

(7) After the establishment of the Federation the request of a Ruler that his State may be admitted to the Federation shall be transmitted to His Majesty through the Governor-General, and after the expiration of twenty years from the establishment of the Federation the Governor-General shall not transmit to His Majesty any such request until there has been presented to him by each Chamber of the Federal Legislature, for submission to His Majesty, an address praying that His Majesty may be pleased to admit the State into the Federation.

(8) In this Act a State which has acceded to the Federation is referred to as a Federated State, and the Instrument by virtue of which a State has so acceded, construed together with any supplementary Instrument executed under this section, is referred to as the Instrument of Accession of that State.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

(9) As soon as may be after any Instrument of Accession or supplementary Instrument has been accepted by His Majesty under this section, copies of the Instrument and of His Majesty's Acceptance thereof shall be laid before Parliament, and all courts shall take judicial notice of every such Instrument and Acceptance.

NOTES :—See Appendix G for the Draft Instrument of Accession. The J. P. C. Report stated :—"The rights, authority and jurisdiction which will be conferred by the Crown on the new Central Government will not extend to any Indian State. It follows that the accession of an Indian State to the Federation cannot take place other than by the voluntary act of its Ruler. The Constitution Act cannot itself make any Indian State a member of the Federation (Paragraph 154). It would, we think, be very desirable that the Instruments of Accession should in all cases be in the same form.....but there can be no obligation on the Crown to accept an accession, where the exceptions or reservations sought to be made by the Ruler are such as to make the accession illusory or merely colourable." (Paragraph 156).

The clause in the Government of India Bill was the subject of considerable comment. "The Princes have all along looked upon the treaties of Accession as the really operative instruments binding them to the Federal Constitution, and not the Constitution Act, which, as an Act of Parliament, they cannot be expected to accept as binding on them or as applicable to their States and their subjects.....These treaties of Accession were intended to be bilateral in character creating rights and imposing reciprocal obligations both on the Rulers of Indian States and on the Crown." (Vide Note attached to the letter His Excellency the Viceroy by Their Highnesses the Maharaja of Patiala, the Nawab of Bhopal, and the Maharaja of Bikaner, dated the 27th February 1935).

In the same Note Their Highnesses wrote :— “The documents of 1818, by which several States parted with their external and foreign relations in consideration of their being adequately protected from both foreign aggression and internal upheaval, were regarded as treaties of mutual friendship, amity and alliance. The proposed documents of 1935, by which the States are asked further to transfer some of their internal sovereignty as well to His Majesty the King as a result of proposals regarding Federation, are only to be Treaties of Accession. The Princes are asked to execute and sign these Instruments of Accession without regard to the derogation of their position from allies and absolute rulers in their own territories..... This undermining process is to be kept up and strengthened under the force of judge-made laws and new political theories, while re-enforcing the claims of paramountcy by the same device. It is very natural that the Princes should have serious objections to the process of gradual decline in their political status. The Princes had only agreed to federate in the interests of the Empire. In conclusion it would be well to remember that the Princes had originally accepted the invitation to federate out of their anxious desire to be of service to the Empire. The structure of the Treaty of Accession ought to be well in keeping with the spirit that had induced the States to accept the federal scheme.” It is only natural to expect that this aspect will be given due weight and importance when the reasonable reservations in the Instrument of Accession come up for examination.

Sir Samuel Hoare wrote in his Memorandum to the Government of India dated the 4th March 1935:—“So far as regards the States, the Bill, when it has become law will provide the machinery whereby the Indian States may severally accept that Constitution and thus become part of the Federation, not because the Act is an Act of Parliament, but because it embodies a Constitution to which they have of their own volition acceded.....That the Constitutional structure must be accepted as a whole seems obvious.....It is contended that not only ought each Ruler to be able to specify those sections of the Act which he is willing to accept, but also that the Federal Constitution as regards each State is to be looked for exclusively in the Instrument of Accession of that State.....Such a conception of Federation would imply the possibility not only of different Constitutions for the States and for British India, but even of a variety of Constitutions among the States themselves.....Their Highnesses lay stress on what they describe as the bilateral nature of the Instruments of Accession. These Instruments are bilateral in so far as they have no binding force until His Majesty has signified his acceptance of them; but His Majesty's Government cannot on that ground accept the view that they are to be described as "treaties". Though the word "treaty" is not used in S. 6 and only the words "Instrument of Accession" are used, the suggestions were partly accepted; and Clause 6 of the Bill was modified by the substitution of the words "accedes to the Federation as established under this Act" instead of the words "accepts this Act as applicable to his State and to his subjects." Again the words "by virtue of his Instrument of Accession, but subject always to the terms thereof, and for the purposes only of the Federation" are additions in Section 6 [1] (a); and the words "to the provisions of the Act so far as they are applicable therein by virtue of his Instrument of Accession" instead of "to this Act" used in the Bill are also additions in Section 6 (1) (b) to make the meaning clear. Sub-section (4) is also now.

CHAPTER II.

The Federal Executive.The Governor-General.7.— Functions of Governor-General.*8.—Extent of executive authority of the Federation:—

(1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, the executive authority of the Federation extends—

- (a) to the matters with respect to which the Federal Legislature has power to make laws;
- (b) to the raising in British India on behalf of His Majesty of naval, military and air forces and to the governance of His Majesty's forces borne on the Indian establishment;
- (c) to the exercise of such rights, authority and jurisdiction as are exercisable by His Majesty by treaty, grant, usage, sufferance, or otherwise in and in relation to the tribal areas:

Provided that—

- (i) the said authority does not, save as expressly provided in this Act, extend in any Province to matters with respect to which the Provincial Legislature has power to make laws;

*Constitutional Governments are classified as Parliamentary or Presidential. Under the former the Executive is responsible to the Legislature and liable to be dismissed by it. Under the latter, the Chief of the Executive is elected directly by the people or their representatives for a fixed period and is not responsible to the Legislature.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

- (ii) the said authority does not, save as expressly provided in this Act, extend in any Federated State save to matters with respect to which the Federal Legislature has power to make laws for that State, and the exercise thereof in each State shall be subject to such limitations, if any, as may be specified in the Instrument of Accession of the State;
- (iii) the said authority does not extend to the enlistment or enrolment in any forces raised in India of any person unless he is either a subject of His Majesty or a native of India or of territories adjacent to India; and
- (iv) commissions in any such force shall be granted by His Majesty save in so far as he may be pleased to delegate that power by virtue of the provisions of Part I of this Act or otherwise.

(2) The executive authority of the Ruler of a Federated State shall, notwithstanding anything in this section, continue to be exercisable in that State with respect to matters with respect to which the Federal Legislature has power to make laws for that State except in so far as the executive authority of the Federation becomes exercisable in the State to the exclusion of the executive authority of the Ruler by virtue of a Federal law.

NOTES:--The words "subject to the provisions of this Act" at the commencement of sub-section (1) require a word of explanation. Sir Samuel Hoare wrote in his Memorandum:— “Where administration of a subject has, in virtue of an agreement attached to the Instrument of Accession, been undertaken by the Ruler of a State, the executive authority of the Federation cannot itself undertake such administration, though it has appeared unnecessary to make any express provision to this effect in view of the opening words of clause 8 ‘Subject to the provisions of this Act.’”

Sub-Section (2) is an addition in the Act not found in the Bill; the second proviso to sub-section (1)c makes the meaning clearer. Sir Samuel Hoare wrote, “Since by clause 8, the executive authority of the Federation is correlated to the legislative power, it follows (and indeed it is expressly so provided) that a Ruler can to the same extent exclude the exercise of the executive authority in his State or qualify it by corresponding conditions of limitations. But His Majesty’s Government recognize that in a few instances the Bill does confer an executive authority on the Federation which is not related to an item in the Federal Legislative List and it is undoubtedly the case that, as the Bill stands at present, a Ruler could not by his Instrument of Accession exclude or qualify the executive authority of the Federation in respect of these matters..... His Majesty’s Government are, however, willing to make it clear that the executive authority of the State would continue in respect of its own laws, being laws not inconsistent with any Federal law applying to the State; and that the executive authority of the State would only be superseded by the executive authority of the Federation when the latter is exercised in virtue of a Federal Law.”. Subsection (2) was added, as also proviso (ii) to subsection (1) (c).in its clear and new form.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

Administration of Federal Affairs.

*9. Council of ministers:— (1) There shall be a council of ministers, not exceeding ten in number, to aid and advise the Governor-General in the exercise of his functions, except in so far as he is by or under this Act required to exercise his functions or any of them in his discretion:

Provided that nothing in this subsection shall be construed as preventing the Governor-General from exercising his individual judgment in any case where by or under this Act he is required so to do.

(2) The Governor-General in his discretion may preside at meetings of the council of ministers.

(3) If any question arises whether any matter is or is not a matter as respects which the Governor-General is by or under this Act required to act in his discretion or to exercise his individual judgment, the decision of the Governor-General in his discretion shall be final, and the validity of anything done by the Governor-General shall not be called in question on the ground that he ought or ought not to have acted in his discretion, or ought or ought not to have exercised his individual judgment.

* The J. P. C. Report stated :— “There will, therefore, be centripetal as well as centrifugal forces, and it seems to us conceivable that, until the advent of a new hitherto unknown alignment of parties, a Central Executive such as we have described may even come to function, as we believe that the Executive of the Swiss Confederation functions as a kind of business committee of the Legislature.”

NOTES :—Some sort of dyarchy is introduced in the Central Executive. The J. P. C. Report stated:—"It is then proposed that there shall be a Council of Ministers, chosen and summoned by the G-G and holding office during his pleasure, to aid and advise him in the exercise of the powers conferred on him by the Constitution Act other than his powers relating to (1) defence, external affairs and ecclesiastical affairs, and (2) matters left by the Act to the Governor-General's discretion.....We assume therefore that they will not be entitled to advise him in the exercise of any prerogative powers of the Crown which may be delegated, presumably in the Letters Patent constituting the office. We are of opinion that this is a proper distinction to draw; that ministers should not, for example, have the right to advise him on the exercise of such a prerogative of His Majesty as the grant of honours.."

10. Other provisions as to ministers:—(1) The Governor-General's ministers shall be chosen and summoned by him, shall be sworn as members of the council, and shall hold office during his pleasure.

(2) A minister who for any period of six consecutive months is not a member of either Chamber of the Federal Legislature shall at the expiration of that period cease to be a minister.

(3) The salaries of ministers shall be such as the Federal Legislature may from time to time by Act determine and, until the Federal Legislature so determine, shall be determined by the Governor-General:

Provided that the salary of a minister shall not be varied during his term of office.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

(4) The question whether any and, if so, what advice was tendered by ministers to the Governor-General shall not be inquired into in any court.

(5) The functions of the Governor-General with respect to the choosing and summoning and the dismissal of ministers, and with respect to the determination of their salaries, shall be exercised by him in his discretion.

11. Provisions as to defence, ecclesiastical affairs, external affairs, and the tribal areas:— (1) The functions of the Governor-General with respect to defence and ecclesiastical affairs and with respect to external affairs, except the relations between the Federation and any part of His Majesty's dominions, shall be exercised by him in his discretion, and his functions in or in relation to the tribal areas shall be similarly exercised.

(2) To assist him in the exercise of those functions the Governor-General may appoint counsellors, not exceeding three in number, whose salaries and conditions of service shall be such as may be prescribed by His Majesty in Council.

NOTES:—On the subjects of defence and foreign relations the Note of Their Highnesses, referred to already, stated:— “The States have, however, every right to expect that when the time arrives for transferring them to the Federal Government, the States would be fully consulted and adequate measures taken to have their own rights and privileges taken into consideration. Until that time has arrived, however, the States desire that, so far as they are concerned, the existing arrangements should continue, and no further obligations on account of foreign relations should be undertaken without their previous consent.”

Regarding the constitution of Advisory Committees the J. P. C. Report stated:— “An advisory body similar to that of the Committee of Imperial Defence, constituted at the G.-G.’s discretion,.....might, we think, have many advantages.....and provided that the extent and methods of consultation are clearly understood to rest in the discretion of the G.-G., we see no objection to the formation of any committee or committees that the Federal Government and Legislature may consider useful.” In another connection the Report stated :—“ We assume that the Department of External Affairs will maintain a close contact with the Department of Trade and Commerce.”

The words “except the relations between the Federation and any part of His Majesty’s Dominions” in the Section may be noted.

12.— Special responsibilities of Governor-General:—(1) In the exercise of his functions the Governor-General shall have the following special responsibilities, that is to say,—

- (a) the prevention of any grave menace to the peace or tranquillity of India or any part thereof;
- (b) the safeguarding of the financial stability and credit of the Federal Government;
- (c) the safeguarding of the legitimate interests of minorities;
- (d) the securing to, and to the dependants of, persons who are or have been members of the public services of any rights provided or preserved for them by or under this Act and the safeguarding of their legitimate interests;
- (e) the securing in the sphere of executive action of the purposes which the provisions of chapter III

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

of Part V of this Act are designed to secure in relation to legislation;

- (f) the prevention of action which would subject goods of United Kingdom or Burmese origin imported into India to discriminatory or penal treatment;
- (g) the protection of the rights of any Indian State and the rights and dignity of the Ruler thereof;
and
- (h) the securing that the due discharge of his functions with respect to matters with respect to which he is by or under this Act required to act in his discretion, or to exercise his individual judgment, is not prejudiced or impeded by any course of action taken with respect to any other matter.

(2) If and in so far as any special responsibility of the Governor-General is involved, he shall in the exercise of his functions exercise his individual judgment as to the action to be taken.

NOTES:—In discharging his functions in which the G-G is of opinion that any one of his responsibilities is involved, “he will be at liberty to act in such manner as he judges requisite for the fulfilment of that special responsibility, even though this may be contrary to the advice which his Ministers have tendered.” Sub-section 2 says that he shall then exercise his individual judgment; and Section 14 later on provides for the superintendence of the Secretary of State in matters where the G-G is required to act in his discretion or to exercise his individual judgment.

Regarding sub-clause (g) of the corresponding clause in the Government of India Bill, the Princes' Note contained the following:—"Protection should be extended not only to the vital and legitimate interests of the Indian States but also to the privileges and dignity of the Rulers. They should continue to enjoy the recognised privileges of Sovereign Rulers." Item (g) has been accordingly recast in the Act.

Regarding item (h) the J. P. C. Report stated :— "It is plain that the G-G must be free to exercise his own judgment in any matter which affects the administration of any of the reserved departments, even though it arises primarily within the ministerial sphere."

Sir Samuel Hoare wrote about special responsibilities thus:—"The special responsibilities relate only to his relations which his Ministers in the process of arriving at a decision as to action to be taken in the exercise of the executive authority of the Federation. The first special responsibility would not enable the G.-G. to take any action in a State which the Federal Government was not otherwise competent to take in virtue of clause 8 (now section 8) read with the provision in the Legislative Lists, and subject, in relation to any State, to any conditions and limitations attached by the Ruler to acceptance of items in the Federal List. No power of intervention in a State by the G.-G. in a non-federal matter would flow from this clause."

13. Provisions as to Instrument of Instructions:—

(1) The Secretary of State shall lay before Parliament the draft of any Instrument of Instructions (including any Instrument amending or revoking an Instrument previously issued) which it is proposed to recommend His Majesty to issue to the Governor-General, and no further proceedings shall be taken in relation thereto except in pursuance of an address presented to His Majesty by both Houses of Parliament praying that the Instrument may be issued.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

(2) The validity of anything done by the Governor-General shall not be called in question on the ground that it was done otherwise than in accordance with any Instrument of Instructions issued to him.

NOTES:—The Instrument of Instructions may be the medium for setting up certain conventions. For instance, the J. P. C. Report stated:—“We understand the intention of His Majesty’s Government to be that the principle of joint deliberation (between the Counsellors and the Ministers) shall be recognised and encouraged by the G.G.’s Instrument of Instruction.” In another connection the Report stated:—.....“Under the White Paper proposals, the G.G. is to be directed by his Instrument of Instructions to include “so far as possible” in his Ministry, not only members of important minority communities, but also representatives of the States which accede to the Federation.” It is submitted that though several matters in which the States are interested cannot be legally put in as reservations in the Instrument of Accession, yet they can apply for the same to be included in the Instrument of Instructions as items in which some constitutional conventions may be set up for safeguarding the interests and claims of the States.

14. Superintendence of Secretary of State:—(1) In so far as the Governor-General is by or under this Act required to act in his discretion or to exercise his individual judgment, he shall be under the general control of, and comply with such particular directions, if any, as may from time to time be given to him by, the Secretary of State, but the validity of anything done by the Governor-General shall not be called in question on the ground that it was done otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this section.

15. Financial adviser to Governor-General:— (1) The Governor-General may appoint a person to be his financial adviser.

(2) It shall be the duty of the Governor-General's financial adviser to assist by his advice the Governor-General in the discharge of his special responsibility for safeguarding the financial stability and credit of the Federal Government, and also to give advice to the Federal Government upon any matter relating to finance with respect to which he may be consulted.

(3) The Governor-General's financial adviser shall hold office during the pleasure of the Governor-General, and the salary and allowances of the financial adviser and the numbers of his staff and their conditions of service, shall be such as the Governor-General may determine.

(4) The powers of the Governor-General with respect to the appointment and dismissal of a financial adviser, and with respect to the determination of his salary and allowances and the numbers of his staff and their conditions of service, shall be exercised by him in his discretion:

Provided that, if the Governor-General has determined to appoint a financial adviser, he shall, before making any appointment other than the first appointment, consult his ministers as to the person to be selected.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

NOTES:—The J. P. C. Report stated;—“We think that the Financial Adviser must be regarded technically as the G.G.’s adviser, but his advice ought to be available to Ministers and we hope that they will freely consult him.”

16 Advocate-General for Federation:—(1) The Governor-General shall appoint a person, being a person qualified to be appointed a judge of the Federal Court, to be Advocate-General for the Federation.

(2) It shall be the duty of the Advocate-General to give advice to the Federal Government upon such legal matters, and to perform such other duties of a legal character, as may be referred or assigned to him by the Governor-General, and in the performance of his duties he shall have right of audience in all courts in British India and, in a case in which federal interests are concerned, in all courts in any Federated State.

(3) The Advocate-General shall hold office during the pleasure of the Governor-General, and shall receive such remuneration as the Governor-General may determine.

(4) In exercising his powers with respect to the appointment and dismissal of the Advocate General and with respect to the determination of his remuneration, the Governor-General shall exercise his individual judgment.

NOTES:— It is submitted that under the rule-making powers conferred on the Federal Court by S. 214, reciprocal rights of audience in the Federal Court should be given to the Advocate General of a Federated State or his substitute in cases in which the interests of the State are concerned.

The J. P. C. Report stated:— “ We think it essential that the Advocate-General should hold his office on a settled tenure and should have no political associations with the Federal Ministry."

17.—Conduct of business of Federal Government.

CHAPTER III

The Federal Legislature

General.

18.— Constitution of the Federal Legislature.—(1) There shall be a Federal Legislature which shall consist of His Majesty, represented by the Governor-General, and two Chambers, to be known respectively as the Council of State and the House of Assembly (in this Act referred to as "the Federal Assembly").

(2) The Council of State shall consist of one hundred and fifty-six representatives of British India and not more than one hundred and four representatives of the Indian States, and the Federal Assembly shall consist of two hundred and fifty representatives of British India and not more than one hundred and twenty-five representatives of the Indian States.

(3) The said representatives shall be chosen in accordance with the provisions in that behalf contained in the First Schedule to this Act.

(4) The Council of State shall be a permanent body not subject to dissolution, but as near as may be one-third of the members thereof shall retire in every third year in accordance with the provisions in that behalf contained in the said First Schedule.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

(5) Every Federal Assembly, unless sooner dissolved, shall continue for five years from the date appointed for their first meeting and no longer, and the expiration of the said period of five years shall operate as a dissolution of the Assembly.

NOTES:—Legislatures are either unicameral or bicameral according as the legislature consists of a single chamber or double chambers respectively. Sir John Marriot says:—"The world has decided with rare uniformity in favour of the bi-cameral form of legislature. Experiments in unicameralism have been few and unimportant, and have invariably resulted in demonstrating the necessity of a second chamber.....The necessity of a counterpoise to democratic fervour; the safety that lies in sober second thoughts; the advisability of a check on hasty and ill-considered legislation; the value of an appeal from Philip drunk to Philip sober; the liability of a second Chamber to violent gusts of passion,—these are arguments for second Chambers. But "to devise a good Second Chamber, to discover for it a basis which shall be at once intelligible and differentiating, to give it powers of revision without powers of control, to make it amenable to permanent public sentiment and yet independent of transient public opinion; to erect a bulwark against revolution without interposing a barrier to reform—this is a task which has baffled the ingenuity of Constitution-mongers from time immemorial." It is argued that the bicameral system is essential to the successful working of a genuine federal system. A federal second chamber is a ready and convenient means of satisfying the Centrifugal sentiments of the federal units.

19. Sessions of the Legislature, prorogation and dissolution:—(1) The Chambers of the Federal Legislature shall be summoned to meet once at least in every year, and twelve months shall not intervene between their last sitting in one session and the date appointed for their first sitting in the next session.

Officers of Chambers:—(1) The Council of State shall as soon as may be choose two members of the Council to be respectively President and Deputy-President thereof and, so often as the office of President or Deputy-President becomes vacant, the Council shall choose another member to be President or Deputy-President, as the case may be.

(2) A member holding office as President or Deputy-President of the Council of State shall vacate his office if he ceases to be a member of the Council, may at any time resign his office by writing under his hand addressed to the Governor-General, and may be removed from his office by a resolution of the Council passed by a majority of all the then members of the Council; but no resolution for the purpose of this subsection shall be moved unless at least fourteen days' notice has been given of the intention to move the resolution.

(3) While the office of President is vacant, the duties of the office shall be performed by the Deputy-President, or, if the office of Deputy-President is also vacant, by such member of the Council as the Governor-General may in his discretion appoint for the purpose, and during any absence of the President from any sitting of the

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

Council the Deputy-President or, if he is also absent, such person as may be determined by the rules of procedure of the Council, or, if no such person is present, such other person as may be determined by the Council, shall act as President.

(4) There shall be paid to the President and the Deputy-President of the Council of State such salaries as may be respectively fixed by Act of the Federal Legislature, and, until provision in that behalf is so made, such salaries as the Governor-General may determine.

(5) The foregoing provisions of this section shall apply in relation to the Federal Assembly as they apply in relation to the Council of State with the substitution of the titles "Speaker" and "Deputy-Speaker" for the titles "President" and "Deputy-President" respectively, and with the substitution of references to the Assembly for references to the Council:

Provided that, without prejudice to the provisions of subsection (2) of this section as applied by this subsection, whenever the Assembly is dissolved, the Speaker shall not vacate his office until immediately before the first meeting of the Assembly after the dissolution.

23. Voting in Chambers, power of Chambers to act notwithstanding vacancies, and quorum. (1) Save as provided in the last preceding section, all questions at any sitting or joint sitting of the Chambers shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present and voting, other than the President or Speaker or person acting as such.

The President or Speaker or person acting as such shall not vote in the first instance, but shall have and exercise a casting vote in the case of an equality of votes.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

Provided that a disqualification under paragraph (f) of this subsection shall not take effect until the expiration of one month from the date by which the return ought to have been lodged or of such longer period as the Governor-General, acting in his discretion, may in any particular case allow.

(4) For the purposes of this section a person shall not be deemed to hold an office of profit under the Crown in India by reason only that—

- (a) he is a minister either for the Federation or for a Province; or
- (b) while serving a State, he remains a member of one of the services of the Crown in India and retains all or any of his rights as such.

Note.— Subsection (3) (3) is an addition for which there was no provision in the Bill.

27. Penalty for sitting and voting when not qualified, or when disqualified.

28. Privileges &c. of members.

29. Salaries and allowances of members.

(4) A Bill pending in the Council of State which has not been passed by the Federal Assembly shall not lapse on a dissolution of the Assembly.

the Governor-General may, unless the Bill has lapsed by reason of a dissolution of the Assembly, notify to the Chambers, by message if they are sitting or by public notification if they are not sitting, his intention to summon them to meet in a joint sitting for the purpose of deliberating and voting on the Bill:

Provided that, if it appears to the Governor-General that the Bill relates to finance or to any matter which affects the discharge of his functions in so far as he is by or under this Act required to act in his discretion or to exercise his individual judgment, he may so notify the Chambers notwithstanding that there has been no rejection of or final disagreement as to the Bill and notwithstanding that the said period of six months has not elapsed, if he is satisfied that there is no reasonable prospect of the Bill being presented to him for his assent without undue delay.

(2) A Bill reserved for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure shall not become an Act of the Federal Legislature unless and until, within twelve months from the day on which it was presented to the Governor-General, the Governor-General makes known by public notification that His Majesty has assented thereto.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

(3) Any Act assented to by the Governor-General may be disallowed by His Majesty within twelve months from the day of the Governor-General's assent, and where any Act is so disallowed the Governor-General shall forthwith make the disallowance known by public notification, and as from the date of the notification the Act shall become void.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

it necessary for him to take immediate action, he may promulgate such ordinances as the circumstances appear to him to require:

Provided that the Governor-General—

(a) shall exercise his individual judgment as respects the promulgation of any ordinance under this section if a Bill containing the same provisions would under this Act have required his previous sanction to the introduction thereof into the Legislature; and

(b) shall not, without instructions from His Majesty promulgate any such ordinance if he would have deemed it necessary to reserve a Bill containing the same provisions for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure thereon.

(2) An ordinance promulgated under this section shall have the same force and effect as an Act of the Federal Legislature assented to by the Governor-General, but every such ordinance—

(a) shall be laid before the Federal Legislature and shall cease to operate at the expiration of six weeks from the re-assembly of the Legislature, or, if before the expiration of that period resolutions disapproving it are passed by both Chambers, upon the passing of the second of those resolutions;

(b) shall be subject to the provisions of this Act relating to the power of His Majesty to disallow Acts as if it were an Act of the Federal

Legislature assented to by the Governor-General; and

- (c) may be withdrawn at any time by the Governor-General.

(3) If and so far as an ordinance under this section makes any provision which the Federal Legislature would not under this Act be competent to enact, it shall be void.

NOTES :—The following Bills should be reserved for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure:—

- (a) any Bill the provisions of which would repeal or be repugnant to the provisions of any Act of Parliament extending to British India;
- (b) any Bill which would, if it became law so derogate from the powers of the High Court of any Province as to endanger the position which these Courts are by the said Act designed to fill;
- (c) any Bill passed by a Provincial Legislature and reserved for his consideration which would alter the character of the Permanent Settlement;
- (d) any Bill regarding which doubt may be felt by the Governor-General whether it does or does not offend against the purposes of Chap III, Part V of the Government of India Act (re. provisions against discrimination). Vide draft Instrument of Instructions to the G-G.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

immediate action for the purpose of enabling him satisfactorily to discharge his functions in so far as he is by or under this Act required in the exercise thereof to act in his discretion or to exercise his individual judgment, he may promulgate such ordinances as in his opinion the circumstances of the case require.

(2) An ordinance promulgated under this section shall continue in operation for such period not exceeding six months as may be specified therein, but may by a subsequent ordinance be extended for a further period not exceeding six months.

(3) An ordinance promulgated under this section shall have the same force and effect as an Act of the Federal Legislature assented to by the Governor-General, but every such ordinance—

(5) The functions of the Governor-General under this section shall be exercised by him in his discretion.

44. Power of Governor-General in certain circumstances to enact Acts:—(1) If at any time it appears to the Governor-General that, for the purpose of enabling him satisfactorily to discharge his functions in so far as he is by or under this Act required in the exercise thereof to act in his discretion or to exercise his individual judgment, it is essential that provision should be made by legislation, he may by message to both Chambers of the Legislature explain the circumstances which in his opinion render legislation essential, and either—

- (a) enact forthwith, as a Governor-General's Act, a Bill containing such provisions as he considers necessary; or
- (b) attach to his message a draft of the Bill which he considers necessary.

(2) Where the Governor-General takes such action as is mentioned in paragraph (b) of the preceding subsection, he may at any time after the expiration of one month enact, as a Governor-General's Act, the Bill proposed by him to the Chambers either in the form of the draft communicated to them or with such amendments as he deems necessary, but before so doing he shall consider any address which may have been presented to him within the said period by either Chamber with reference to the Bill or to amendments suggested to be made therein.

the same manner, as an Act of the Federal Legislature assented to by the Governor-General and, if and in so far as a Governor-General's Act makes any provision which the Federal Legislature would not under this Act be competent to enact, it shall be void.

(4) Every Governor-General's Act shall be communicated forthwith to the Secretary of State and shall be laid by him before each House of Parliament.

(5) The functions of the Governor-General under this section shall be exercised by him in his discretion

NOTE:— Subsection (1) (a) is new (not in the Bill.)

CHAPTER V.

Provisions in case of Failure of Constitutional Machinery.

45. Power of Governor-General to issue Proclamations:—(1) If at any time the Governor-General is satisfied that a situation has arisen in which the government of the Federation cannot be carried on in accordance with the provisions of this Act, he may by Proclamation—

- (a) declare that his functions shall to such extent as may be specified in the Proclamation be exercised by him in his discretion;
- (b) assume to himself, all or any of the powers vested in or exercisable by any Federal body or authority, and any such Proclamation may contain such incidental and consequential provisions as may appear to him to be necessary or desirable for giving effect to the objects of the Proclamation, including provisions for suspending in whole or in part the operation of any provisions of this Act relating to any Federal body or authority:

Provided that nothing in this subsection shall authorise the Governor-General to assume to himself any of the powers vested in or exercisable by the Federal Court or to suspend, either in whole or in part, the operation of any provision of this Act relating to the Federal Court.

(2) Any such Proclamation may be revoked or varied by a subsequent Proclamation.

(3) A Proclamation issued under this section—

- (a) shall be communicated forthwith to the Secretary of State and shall be laid by him before each House of Parliament;
- (b) unless it is a Proclamation revoking a previous Proclamation, shall cease to operate at the expiration of six months:

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

(5) If the Governor-General, by a Proclamation under this section, assumes to himself any power of the Federal Legislature to make laws, any law made by him in the exercise of that power shall, subject to the terms thereof, continue to have effect until two years have elapsed from the date on which the Proclamation ceases to have effect, unless sooner repealed or re-enacted by Act of the appropriate Legislature, and any reference in this Act to Federal Acts, Federal laws, or Acts or laws of the Federal Legislature shall be construed as including a reference to such a law.

(6) The functions of the Governor-General under this section shall be exercised by him in his discretion.

Subsection (4) and (5) are new. The Hydari Committee Report dated the 21st February 1935 stated:— “While the States are willing to accede to the Federation for the purpose of obtaining a Constitution giving responsible Government at the Centre, it is not obviously intended that if such responsibility has become impossible of attainment, the powers handed over by the Federated States should still be subtracted from them.” Their Highnesses’ Note stated:— “It was understood that in the event of a breakdown of the Federal Constitution or an amendment without the consent of the States, beyond such minor changes in respect of which previous consultation may not be necessary by agreement, the trust would be determined and the powers transferred would revert to States.” “Regarding the break-down, Sir Samuel Hoare wrote:— “His Majesty’s Government, however, see no objection to meeting any apprehensions that may be felt about this clause by inserting a time-limit on its operation.” Subsection 4 was accordingly inserted.

(2) Where a Provincial law with respect to one of the matters enumerated in the Concurrent Legislative List contains any provision repugnant to the provisions of an earlier Federal law or an existing Indian law with respect to that matter, then, if the Provincial law, having been reserved for the consideration of the Governor-General or for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure, has received the assent of the Governor-General or of His Majesty, the Provincial law shall in that Province prevail, but nevertheless the Federal Legislature may at any time enact further legislation with respect to the same matter:

having been so reserved, has received the assent of the Governor-General or of His Majesty, shall be introduced or moved in either Chamber of the Federal Legislature without the previous sanction of the Governor-General in his discretion.

128. Duty of Ruler of a State as respects Federal subjects:—(1) The executive authority of every Federated State shall be so exercised as not to impede or prejudice the exercise of the executive authority of the Federation so far as it is exercisable in the State by virtue of a law of the Federal Legislature which applies therein.

(2) If it appears to the Governor-General that the Ruler of any Federated State has in any way failed to fulfil his obligations under the preceding subsection, the Governor-General, acting in his discretion, may after considering any representations made to him by the Ruler issue such directions to the Ruler as he thinks fit :

Provided that, if any question arises under this section as to whether the executive authority of the Federation is exercisable in a State with respect to any matter or as to the extent to which it is so exercisable, the question may, at the instance either of the Federation or the Ruler, be referred to the Federal Court for determination by that Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction under this Act.

NOTES on Sections 124 to 128:— The Act provides the following methods of Local Administration: (1) It may be entrusted conditionally or unconditionally to the Ruler or his Officers by the Governor-General with the Ruler's consent (2) An Act of the Federal Legislature may confer powers and impose duties on officers and authorities of the State to be designated for the purpose by the Ruler. The Act may very likely provide, if necessary, for the withdrawal of such Officers from the control of the State unless otherwise provided for (3) "Provision may be made by agreement. Agreements may, and if provision has been made in the Instrument of Accession shall, be made between the G-G and the Ruler regarding administration." In such cases, there is a provision for inspection. Unless there is a high standard of administrative efficiency, local administration cannot generally be claimed by the States (4) The last method is under Section 6 (2) by which reservations of executive authority may be made.

In the Princes' Note it was stated:-"Accepting the suggestion of the Joint Select Committee with regard to the Federal Court, clause 201 has provided that the Federal Court, if it requires the aid of the civil or judicial authorities in a Federated State, shall cause a letter of request in that behalf to be sent to the Ruler of that State. Cannot a similar letter of request be also sent to the Ruler whose system of administration may be inadequate for the federal objects in view? If diplomatic action or friendly persuasion has been known till now to have achieved its end, there is little justification to substitute in their place the sending of directions and instructions for the improvement of the administration of a State, even in a department dealing with a non-federal subject, simply because the exercise of the executive authority of the Federation is felt to be impeded or prejudicially affected."

To this, Sir Samuel Hoare replied:-"The procedure which the Note suggests of "Letters of Request" does not appear suitable. That method was adopted in clause 201 in order to meet the special relations in which the Federal Court stands towards a State High Court, which find no parallel in the relations of the Governor-General to the Ruler of a State."

The words "in accordance with the policy.....fit" in Section 125 (2) are additions in the Act as also 125 (3). The words "so far as it is.....there n" in Section 128 (1) and the proviso in 128 (2), are additions in the Act. In the Act, the words "or has failed to maintain a system of administration adequate for the purposes of any Act of the Federal Legislature, the administration of which has been entrusted to him or to his officers" were used in the Bill in the corresponding clause with reference to the Ruler of a Federated State under the duty of a State as respects Federal subjects in what has now become law under Section 128 (2). But the Act has omitted the words found originally in the Bill.

Distribution of Revenues between the Federation and the Federal Units.

136. Meaning of "revenues of Federation" and "revenues of Province."

137. Certain succession duties, Stamp duties, terminal taxes and taxes on fares and freights:—Duties in respect of succession to property other than agricultural land, such stamp duties as are mentioned in the Federal Legislative List, terminal taxes on goods or passengers carried by railway, or air, and taxes on railway fares and freights, shall be levied and collected by the Federation, but the net proceeds in any financial year of any such duty or tax, except in so far as those proceeds represent proceeds attributable to Chief Commissioners' Provinces, shall not form part of the revenues of the Federation, but shall be assigned to the Provinces and to the Federated States, if any, within which that duty or tax is leviable in that year, and shall be distributed among the Provinces and those States in accordance with such principles of distribution as may be formulated by Act of the Federal Legislature:

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935. (Contd.)

Provided that the Federal Legislature may at any time increase any of the said duties or taxes by a surcharge for Federal purposes and the whole proceeds of any such surcharge shall form part of the revenues of the Federation.

138. Taxes on income:-(1) Taxes on income other than agricultural income shall be levied and collected by the Federation, but a prescribed percentage of the net proceeds in any financial year of any such tax, except in so far as those proceeds represent proceeds attributable to Chief Commissioners' Provinces or to taxes payable in respect of Federal emoluments, shall not form part of the revenues of the Federation, but shall be assigned to the Provinces and to the Federated States, if any, within which that tax is leviable in that year, and shall be distributed among the Provinces and those States in such manner as may be prescribed:

Provided that—

(a) the percentage originally prescribed under this subsection shall not be increased by any subsequent Order in Council;

(b) the Federal Legislature may at any time increase the said taxes by a surcharge for Federal purposes and the whole proceeds of any such surcharge shall form part of the revenues of the Federation.

(2) Notwithstanding anything in the preceding subsection, the Federation may retain out of the moneys assigned by that subsection to Provinces and States—

- (a) in each year of a prescribed period such sum as may be prescribed; and
- (b) in each year of a further prescribed period a sum less than that retained in the preceding year by an amount, being the same amount in each year, so calculated that the sum to be retained in the last year of the period will be equal to the amount of each such annual reduction:

Provided that—

- (i) neither of the periods originally prescribed shall be reduced by any subsequent Order in Council;
- (ii) the Governor-General in his discretion may in any year of the second prescribed period direct that the sum to be retained by the Federation in that year shall be the sum retained in the preceding year, and that the second prescribed period shall be correspondingly extended, but he shall not give any such direction except after consultation with such representatives of Federal, Provincial and State interests as he may think desirable, nor shall he give any such direction unless he is satisfied that the maintenance of the Federal Government requires him so to do.
- (3) Where an Act of the Federal Legislature imposes a surcharge for Federal purposes under this section, the Act shall provide for the payment by each Federated State in which taxes on income are not leviable by the Federation of a contribution to the revenues of the Federation assessed on such basis as may be prescribed with a view to securing that the contribution shall be the equivalent, as near as may be, of the net proceeds which it is estimated would result from the surcharge if it were leviable in that State, and the State shall become liable to pay that contribution accordingly.

(4) In this section—

“taxes on income” does not include a corporation tax;

“prescribed” means prescribed by His Majesty in Council; and “Federal emoluments” includes all emoluments and pensions payable out of the revenues of the Federation or of the Federal Railway Authority in respect of which income-tax is chargeable.

139. Corporation tax:— (1) Corporation tax shall not be levied by the Federation in any Federated State until ten years have elapsed from the establishment of the Federation.

(2) Any Federal law providing for the levying of corporation tax shall contain provisions enabling the Ruler of any Federated State in which the tax would otherwise be leviable to elect that the tax shall not be levied in the State, but that in lieu thereof there shall be paid by the State to the revenues of the Federation a contribution as near as may be equivalent to the net proceeds which it is estimated would result from the tax if it were levied in the State.

(3) Where the Ruler of a State so elects as aforesaid, the officers of the Federation shall not call for any information or returns from any corporation in the State, but it shall be the duty of the Ruler thereof to cause to be supplied to the Auditor-General of India such information as the Auditor-General may reasonably require to enable the amount of any such contribution to be determined.

If the Ruler of a State is dissatisfied with the determination as to the amount of the contribution payable by his State in any financial year, he may appeal to the Federal Court, and if he establishes to the satisfaction of that Court that the amount determined is excessive, the Court shall reduce the amount accordingly and no appeal shall lie from the decision of the Court on the appeal.

140. Salt duties, excise duties and export duties:—(1) Duties on salt, Federal duties of excise and export duties shall be levied and collected by the Federation, but, if an Act of the Federal Legislature so provides, there shall be paid out of the revenues of the Federation to the Provinces and to the Federated States, if any, to which the Act imposing the duty extends, sums equivalent to the whole or any part of the net proceeds of that duty, and those sums shall be distributed among the Provinces and those States in accordance with such principles of distribution as may be formulated by the Act.

(2) Notwithstanding anything in the preceding subsection, one-half, or such greater proportion as His Majesty in Council may determine, of the net proceeds in each year of any export duty on jute or jute products shall not form part of the revenues of the Federation, but shall be assigned to the Provinces or Federated States in which jute is grown in proportion to the respective amounts of jute grown therein.

141. Prior sanction of Governor-General required to Bills affecting taxation in which Provinces are interested:—

(1) No Bill or amendment which imposes or varies any tax or duty in which Provinces are interested, or which varies the meaning of the expression "agricultural income" as defined for the purposes of the enactments relating to Indian income tax, or which affects the principles on which under any of the foregoing provisions of this chapter moneys are or may be distributable to Provinces or States, or which imposes any such federal surcharge as is mentioned in the foregoing provisions of this chapter, shall be introduced or moved in either Chamber of the Federal Legislature except with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in his discretion.

(2) The Governor-General shall not give his sanction to the introduction of any Bill or the moving of any amendment imposing in any year any such Federal surcharge as aforesaid unless he is satisfied that all practicable economies and all practicable measures for otherwise increasing the proceeds of Federal taxation or the portion thereof retainable by the Federation would not result in the balancing of Federal receipts and expenditure on revenue account in that year.

143. Savings.

144. Calculation of "net proceeds", &c.

NOTES on Sections 136–144 :— The Ministers' Committee Report stated, "The Committee realise that the general and fundamental condition of a balanced budget in the case of the Central and Provincial Governments cannot be specifically enacted in the Statute, but they wish to urge with emphasis that the other two conditions precedent to the adhesion of the States to the financial scheme already specified should be so incorporated Some States like Kashmir, Bhopal and Indore have definitely declined to accept the liability to pay the corporation tax or an equivalent."

The Princes' Note stated, "The Princes have, for instance, from the very outset set their face against any direct tax, and have only agreed to be subjected to certain modes of indirect taxation as their contribution to the Federal fisc..... The Bill ought to make clear distinction between ordinary financial stress and emergencies like wars or years of continuous and chronic financial deficits. To meet the former occasion no State ought to be called on to pay any surcharge or surplus taxes or cash contributions of any kind. Such occasions of stress ought to be bridged over by temporary adjustments and stringent retrenchment of expenditure."

As regards emergency, the States' Delegation had stated, "If at any time even during the period of the first 10 years the financial position becomes such that the Federal expenditure cannot be met from the sources of revenues permissible to the Federal Government after all possible economies had been effected and the sources of indirect taxation open to the Federation exhausted, and the return of income-tax to the Provinces suspended, a state of emergency will be held to have come into being, when all Federal units will make contributions to the Federal fisc on an equitable and prescribed basis."

The Princes' Note stated, "The States would prefer to have cash contributions left to the free volition of the States. Such voluntary aid from Indian Rulers has not failed in the past during wars and other occasions of service to the Empire. If, however, such voluntary contributions are held to be insufficient for the safety of financial forecasts, the Princes would prefer enhancement in the incidence of permissible taxes as, for instance, excise duties on articles like sugar, matches and tobacco, and other commodities manufactured in the country, to be ear-marked for meeting occasions of grave financial stress. The States had agreed to excises on tobacco and matches as Federal sources of revenue permissible in severe emergencies. No provision has been made in the Bill in regard to them as such."

To this Sir Samuel Hoare replied, "The States' accession to the subject of Corporation tax would, of course, be subject to conditions or limits to be expressed in the Instrument of Accession." After referring to the provision regarding commutation, and the expiration of 10 years now found embodied in the Act, he wrote, "Any further conditions could be considered in connection with the negotiations for the Instruments of Accession."

"Apart from this qualification and subject to the special provisions relating to surcharge or taxes on income, no provision is made for the imposition of direct taxation by the Federation in a State, unless at some future date some States may desire to accede to taxation entries within items 46-56 of the Federal Legislative List (i. e. items 48 to 51 and 53 to 59 of the List in the Act). This is admittedly an unlikely development at any near date, but if in future any State should desire to take such a course, there is no reason why provision should not be made of admitting it to corresponding benefits...The question of attachment of conditions to acceptance of item 43 of the Federal Legislative List (i. e. item 45 of the List in the Act) can, as in other instances, be considered in connection with the negotiation of the terms of the Instrument of Accession; but neither in the White Paper nor in the recommendations of the Joint Select Committee can any support be found for the proposal that federal excises should be regarded as in the nature of emergency taxes."

As regards internal customs duties, the J. P. C. Report stated, "It is greatly to be desired that States adhering to the Federation, should, like other Provinces, accept the principle of internal freedom for trade in India and that the Federal Government alone should have the power to impose tariffs and other restrictions on trade. Many States, however, derive substantial revenues from customs duties levied at their frontiers on goods entering the State from other parts of India We recognize that it is impossible to deprive States of revenue upon which they depend for balancing their budgets and that they must be free to alter existing rates of duty to suit varying conditions. But internal customs barriers are in principle inconsistent with the freedom of interchange of a fully developed Federation and we are strongly of the opinion that every effort should be made to substitute other forms of taxation for those internal customs. The change must, of course, be left to the discretion of the States concerned as alternative sources of revenue become available. But in any case we consider that the accession of a State to the Federation should imply its acceptance of the principle that it will not set up a barrier to free interchange so formidable as to constitute a threat to the future of the Federation; and, if there should be any danger of this, we think that the powers entrusted to the Governor-General in his discretion would have to be brought to bear upon the States.

The Crown and the States.

145. Expenses of the Crown in connection with Indian States.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT 1935. (Contd.)

146. Payments from or by Indian States.

NOTE:— This refers to cash contributions and payments in respect of loans.

147. Remission of States contributions: — (1) Subject to the provisions of subsection (3) of this section, His Majesty may, in signifying his acceptance of the Instrument of Accession of a State, agree to remit over a period not exceeding twenty years from the date of the accession of the State to the Federation any cash contributions payable by that State.

(2) Subject as aforesaid, where any territories have been voluntarily ceded to the Crown by a Federated State before the passing of this Act—

- (a) in return for specific military guarantees, or
- (b) in return for the discharge of the State from obligations to provide military assistance, there shall, if His Majesty, in signifying his acceptance of the Instrument of Accession of that State, so directs, be paid to that state, but in the first-mentioned case on condition that the said guarantees are waived, such sums as in the opinion of His Majesty ought to be paid in respect of any such cession as aforesaid.

(3) Notwithstanding anything in this section—

- (a) every such agreement or direction as aforesaid shall be such as to secure that no such remission or payment shall be made by virtue of the agreement or direction until the Provinces have begun to receive moneys under the section of this chapter relating to taxes on income, and, in the case of a remission, that the remission shall be complete before the expiration of twenty years from the date of the accession to the Federation of the State in question, or before the end of the second prescribed period referred to in subsection (2) of the said section, whichever first occurs; and

- (b) no contribution shall be remitted by virtue of any such agreement save in so far as it exceeds the value of any privilege or immunity enjoyed by the State; and
- (c) in fixing the amount of any payments in respect of ceded territories, account shall be taken of the value of any such privilege or immunity.

(4) This section shall apply in the case of any cash contributions the liability for which has before the passing of this Act been discharged by payment of a capital sum or sums, and accordingly His Majesty may agree that the capital sum or sums so paid shall be repaid either by instalments or otherwise, and such repayments shall be deemed to be remissions for the purposes of this section.

(5) In this chapter "cash contributions" means—

- (a) periodical contributions in acknowledgment of the suzerainty of His Majesty, including contributions payable in connection with any arrangement for the aid and protection of a State by His Majesty, and contributions in commutation of any obligation of a State to provide military assistance to His Majesty, or in respect of the maintenance by His Majesty of a special force for service in connection with a State, or in respect of the maintenance of local military forces or police, or in respect of the expenses of an agent;

- (b) periodical contributions fixed on the creation or restoration of a State, or on a re-grant or increase of territory, including annual payments for grants of land on perpetual tenure or for equalisation of the value of exchanged territory;
- (c) periodical contributions formerly payable to another State but now payable to His Majesty by right of conquest, assignment or lapse.

(6) In this chapter "privilege or immunity" means any such right, privilege, advantage or immunity of a financial character as is hereinafter mentioned, that is to say—

- (a) rights, privileges or advantages in respect of or connected with, the levying of sea customs or the production and sale of untaxed salt;
- (b) sums receivable in respect of the abandonment or surrender of the right to levy internal customs duties, or to produce or manufacture salt, or to tax salt or other commodities or goods in transit, or sums receivable in lieu of grants of free salt;
- (c) the annual value to the Ruler of any privilege or territory granted in respect of the abandonment or surrender of any such right as is mentioned in the last preceding paragraph;

(d) privileges in respect of free service stamps or the free carriage of State mails on government business;

(e) the privilege of entry free from customs duties of goods imported by sea and transported in bond to the State in question; and

(f) the right to issue currency notes, not being a right, privilege, advantage or immunity surrendered upon the accession of the State, or one which, in the opinion of His Majesty, for any other reason ought not to be taken into account for the purposes of this chapter.

(7) An Instrument of Accession of a State shall not be deemed to be suitable for acceptance by His Majesty, unless it contains such particulars as appear to His Majesty to be necessary to enable due effect to be given to the provisions of this and the next but one succeeding sections, and in particular provision for determining from time to time the value to be attributed for the purposes of those provisions to any privilege or immunity the value of which is fluctuating or uncertain.

148. Certain payments to Federated States, &c., to be charged on Federal revenues.—Any payments made under the last preceding section and any payments heretofore made to any State by the Governor-General in Council or by any Local Government under any agreements made with that State before the passing of this Act, shall be charged on the revenues of the Federation or on the revenues of the corresponding Province under this Act, as the case may be.

149. Value of privileges and immunities to be set off against share of taxes, &c., assigned to Federated States.—

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935. (Contd.)

Where under the foregoing provisions of this chapter there is made in any year by the Federation to a Federated State any payment or distribution of, or calculated by reference to, the net proceeds of any duty or tax, the value in and for that year of any privilege or immunity enjoyed by that State in respect of any former or existing source of revenue from a similar duty or tax or from goods of the same kind, being a privilege or immunity which has not been otherwise taken into account, shall, if and in so far as the Act of the Federal Legislature under which the payment or distribution is made so provides, be set off against the payment or distribution.

NOTES on Sections 147 to 149 :—The word “periodical” in Subsection 5 of Section 147 is an addition in the Act. In Sub-section 6, the provision under (d) is an addition in the Act.

The States’ Ministers’ Note stated, “The Committee have come to the conclusion that the definition of the term “privilege or immunity” is neither accurate nor acceptable to the States as a whole, that some States in particular raise the strongest possible objection to the description, as a privilege or immunity, of the items referred to in Subclauses (a) to (e) (i. e. roughly items a, b, d, e, and f in Section 147 (6) of the Act), and contend that in most cases these items cannot be defined as concessions, privileges or immunities, many of them having a historical origin and most of them being the result of some specific agreements, compromises or contracts having the character and incidence of reciprocal obligations.”

The Princes’ Note contained the following remark :—

“Many of the financial advantages now enjoyed by the States are not at all gratuitous benefits or immunities; they arise under agreements and have been paid for and purchased for value. Moreover, if any surplus revenue from excise is to be refunded to the States, there is absolutely no justification for any set-off as claimed by clause 147 of the Bill. If surplus taxation is refunded, it surely ought to benefit the people on whom the incidence of tax mainly falls; there is no reason to have it set off against the so-called and fancied immunities, which have a peculiar historical origin and justification of their own and cannot be so unfairly withdrawn.

While dealing with cash contributions, payment of tribute, and ceded territories, the Bill has entirely lost sight of yet another kind of contribution the States have been making towards Federal finance, which deserves proper recognition. The Federal Finance Committee at the Round Table Conferences had enumerated the "contributions in kind made for defence by the maintenance of State Forces." These States forces have now been embodied in the Indian Army as distinct units, ear-marked for service abroad as well as for internal security, and if they are maintained at State expense, their annual charges ought to be distinctly recognized as contributions made by the States towards the Federal fisc and allowances made for them" (See item No. 1 of the Federal Legislative List).

About this Sir Samuel Hoare wrote:- "The definition of privileges and immunities in subsection (6) is based upon the Report of the Davidson Committee. The effect of this sub-clause is of the nature of a protection to the States rather than the reverse, since it limits within the range so defined the matters which the Crown may, when the Instruments of Accession are being negotiated, require a State to acknowledge as financial privileges or immunities. Without such a definition the possible range of such privileges or immunities would be extended."

Miscellaneous Financial Provisions.

150. Expenditure defrayable out of Indian revenues.—

(1) No burden shall be imposed on the revenues of the Federation or the Provinces except for the purposes of India or some part of India.

151. Provisions as to the custody of public moneys.

152. Exercise by Governor-General of certain powers with respect to Reserve Bank.

NOTES on Section 152 :—The Reserve Bank of India Act was passed in 1934. “ It will be the business of the Bank to regulate the issue of Bank-notes and the keeping of reserves with a view to securing monetary stability in British India and generally to operate the currency and credit system of the country to its advantage. The original share capital of the Bank is five crores of rupees divided into shares of one hundred rupees each. Separate registers of share-holders are to be maintained at Bombay, Calcutta, Delhi, Madras and Rangoon. The general superintendence and direction of the affairs and business of the Bank are entrusted to a Central Board of Directors, consisting of a Governor and two Deputy Governors to be appointed by the Governor-General in Council, four Directors to be nominated by the Governor-General in Council, eight Directors to be elected on behalf of the share-holders on the various registers, and one Government official to be nominated by the Governor-General in Council. (Eddy and Lawton in “India’s New Constitution.”)

153. Previous sanction of Governor-General to legislation with respect to Reserve Bank, currency and coinage.—

No Bill or amendment which affects the coinage or currency of the Federation or the constitution or functions of the Reserve Bank of India shall be introduced into or moved in either Chamber of the Federal Legislature without the previous sanction of the Governor-General in his discretion.

154. Exemption of certain public property from taxation.

155. Exemption of provincial Governments and Rulers of Federated States in respect of Federal taxation.

NOTES :—This Section is new. There was no corresponding provision in the Bill. In respect of the Clause in the Bill providing for exemption of Federal property from taxation in a Province or State, the Princes' Note contained the following remark:— “Reciprocity demands that States' properties like Government Securities should be exempted from income-tax and other forms of taxation.” To this Sir Samuel Hoare replied, “It would not be possible to exempt from local taxation all property owned by a State in British India, but His Majesty's Government are willing to consider the insertion of provisions in the Bill to prevent the abolition at any time of the existing immunity from taxes and moneys invested in Government Securities by a State Durbar or by a Provincial Government”.

156. Adjustment in respect of certain expenses and pensions.

157. Duty of Federation and Provinces to supply Secretary of State with funds.

PART VIII.

THE FEDERAL RAILWAY AUTHORITY.

181. Executive authority in respect of railways to be exercised by Federal Railway Authority.

182. Composition, &c. of Railway Authority. — (1) Not less than three-sevenths of the members of the Authority shall be persons appointed by the Governor-General in his discretion, and the Governor-General shall in his discretion appoint a member of the Authority to be the President thereof.

183. Directions and principles to be observed by Railway Authority:—(1) The Authority in discharging their functions under this Act shall act on business principles, due regard being had by them to the interests of agriculture, industry, commerce and the general public, and in particular shall make proper provision for meeting out of their receipts on revenue account all expenditure to which such receipts are applicable under the provisions of this Part of this Act.

184. Conduct of business between Railway Authority and Federal Government.

185. Acquisition and sale of land, contracts and working agreements.

NOTES:— The Princes' Note contained the following remark:—“In the matter of railways also the Indian States are being asked to waive their jurisdiction over lands ceded only for construction of railways, and though retrocession of such jurisdiction is being demanded during the last 15 years, the claim has not yet been met. There is no reason why the Courts in a British Indian Province should exercise such jurisdiction in the territories of Indian States simply because they are traversed by a railway. This cession of jurisdiction over railway lands, lest it becomes perpetual and under Clause 169 of Bill (corresponding in some respects to Section 173) is claimed by way of succession by future federal or Provincial Governments, should be retroceded without further delay..... Retrocession of jurisdiction over railway lands should precede accession to the federation and prevent the descent by way of succession of such jurisdiction from the Governor-General in Council to the Federal Government".

186. Finance of the Railway Authority:—(1) The Authority shall establish, maintain and control a fund (which shall be known as the "Railway Fund") and all moneys received by the Authority, whether on revenue account or on capital account, in the discharge of their functions and all moneys provided, whether on revenue account or on capital account, out of the revenues of the Federation to enable them to discharge those functions shall be paid into that Fund, and all expenditure, whether on revenue account or on capital account, required for the discharge of their functions shall be defrayed out of that Fund:

Provided that nothing in this subsection shall prevent the Authority from establishing and maintaining separate provident funds for the benefit of persons who are or have been employed in connection with railways.

187. Provisions as to certain obligations of the Railway Authority.

188. Investment of funds of Railway Authority.

189. Special provisions as to certain existing funds.

190. Audit and annual reports.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935. (Contd.)

191. Railway Rates Committee:—The Governor-General may from time to time appoint a Railway Rates Committee to give advice to the Authority in connection with any dispute between persons using, or desiring to use, a railway and the Authority as to rates or traffic facilities which he may require the Authority to refer to the committee.

192. Bills and amendments for regulating rates and fares to require recommendation of Governor-General.

193. Obligation of Railway Authority and Federated States to afford mutual traffic facilities and to avoid unfair discrimination, &c.

194. Appeal by State to Railway Tribunal from certain directions of Railway Authority:—If the Authority, in the exercise of any executive authority of the Federation in relation to intercharge of traffic or maximum or minimum rates and fares or station or service terminal charges, give any direction to a Federated State, the State may complain that the direction discriminates unfairly against the railways of the State or imposes on the State an obligation to afford facilities which are not in the circumstances reasonable, and any such complaint shall be determined by the Railway Tribunal.

NOTES on Sections 193 and 194 :— The Princos' Note contained the following remark, "They (the States) could not agree to subordinate the interests of their own railways to the dictates of another railway authority on which they had no standing. The statutory Railway Authority can only be one co-ordinate with and not superior to their own Railway Board. As regards the points agreed to be federal, the Federal Railway Tribunal ought also to be one available to both sides and not one to which the Railway authorities of the State had always to take recourse, like a plaintiff, with the burden of proof placed on their shoulders.'

195. Construction and reconstruction of railways.

196. Railway Tribunal:—(1) There shall be a Tribunal (in this Act referred to as "the Railway Tribunal") consisting of a President and two other persons to be selected to act in each case by the Governor-General in his discretion from a panel of eight persons appointed by him in his discretion, being persons with railway, administrative, or business experience.

(2) The President shall be such one of the judges of the Federal Court as may be appointed for the purpose by the Governor-General in his discretion after consultation with the Chief Justice of India and shall hold office for such period of not less than five years as may be specified in the appointment, and shall be eligible for re-appointment for a further period of five years or any less period:

Provided that, if the President ceases to be a judge of the Federal Court, he shall thereupon cease to be President of the Tribunal and, if he is for any reason temporarily unable to act, the Governor-General in his discretion may after the like consultation appoint another judge of the Federal Court to act for the time being in his place.

(3) It shall be the duty of the Railway Tribunal to exercise such jurisdiction as is conferred on it by this Act, and for that purpose the Tribunal may make such orders, including interim orders, orders varying or discharging a direction or order of the Authority, orders for the payment of compensation or damages and of costs and orders for the production of documents and the attendance of witnesses, as the circumstances of the case may require, and it shall be the duty of the Authority and of every Federated State and of every other person or authority affected thereby to give effect to any such order.

(4) An appeal shall lie to the Federal Court from any decision of the Railway Tribunal on a question of law, but no appeal shall lie from the decision of the Federal Court on any such appeal.

(5) The Railway Tribunal or the Federal Court, as the case may be, may, on application made for the purpose, if satisfied that in view of an alteration in the circumstances it is proper so to do, vary or revoke any previous order made by it.

THE JUDICATURE.

CHAPTER I.

The Federal Court.*

200. Establishment and constitution of Federal Court.
—(1) There shall be a Federal Court consisting of a Chief

*“A Federal Court is an essential element in a Federal Constitution. It is at once the interpreter and guardian of the Constitution and a tribunal for the determination of Justice of India and such number of other judges as His Majesty may deem necessary, but unless and until an address has been presented by the Federal Legislature to the Governor-General for submission to His Majesty praying for an increase in the number of judges, the number of puisne judges shall not exceed six.

(2) Every judge of the Federal Court shall be appointed by His Majesty by warrant under the Royal Sign Manual and shall hold office until he attains the age of sixty-five years :

Provided that—

- (a) a judge may by resignation under his hand addressed to the Governor-General resign his office :
- (b) a judge may be removed from his office by His Majesty by warrant under the Royal Sign Manual on the ground of misbehaviour or of infirmity of mind or body, if the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, on reference being made to them by His Majesty, report that the judge ought on any such ground to be removed.

disputes between the constituent units of the Federation. The establishment of a Federal Court is partly of the White Paper Scheme, and we approve generally of the proposals with regard to it.”—J. P. C. Report.

“Judicial umpiring in constitutional issues is the essence of Federalism”—Mr. E. S. Sunda in his book “The Federal Court of India—A Constitutional Study.”

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935. (Contd.)

(3) A person shall not be qualified for appointment as a judge of the Federal Court unless he—

- (a) has been for at least five years a judge of a High Court in British India or in a Federated State; or
- (b) is a barrister of England or Northern Ireland of at least ten years standing, or a member of the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland of at least ten years standing; or
- (c) has been for at least ten years a pleader of a High Court in British India or in a Federated State or of two or more such Courts in succession.

Provided that—

- (i) a person shall not be qualified for appointment as Chief Justice of India unless he is, or when first appointed to judicial office was, a barrister, a member of the Faculty of Advocates or a pleader; and
- (ii) in relation to the Chief Justice of India, for the references in paragraphs (b) and (c) of this subsection to ten years there shall be substituted references to fifteen years.

In computing for the purposes of this subsection the standing of a barrister or a member of the Faculty of Advocates, or the period during which a person has been a pleader, any period during which a person has held judicial office after he became a barrister, a member of the Faculty of Advocates or a pleader, as the case may be, shall be included.

(4) Every person appointed to be a judge of the Federal Court shall, before he enters upon his office, make and subscribe before the Governor-General or some person appointed by him an oath according to the form set out in that behalf in the Fourth Schedule to this Act.

NOTES:—“In the Australian Act, the Parliament is given the power to decide the number, and the maximum is not fixed.”

“In the North America Act the judges are to hold office during good behaviour. The Australian Act makes ‘proved misbehaviour or incapacity’ as grounds for removal.” Mr. E. S. Sunda in the ‘Federal Court of India.’

201. Salaries, &c. of judges.

202. Temporary appointment of acting Chief Justice.

203. Seat of Federal Court:—The Federal Court shall be a court of record and shall sit in Delhi and at such other place or places, if any, as the Chief Justice of India may, with the approval of the Governor-General, from time to time appoint.

204. Original jurisdiction of Federal Court:—(1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, the Federal Court shall, to the exclusion of any other court, have an original jurisdiction in any dispute between any two or more of the following parties, that is to say, the Federation, any of the Provinces or any of the Federated States, if and in so far as the dispute involves any question (whether of law or fact) on which the existence or extent of a legal right depends :

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935. (Contd.)

Provided that the said jurisdiction shall not extend to—

- (a) a dispute to which a State is a party, unless the dispute—
 - (i) concerns the interpretation of this Act or of an Order in Council made thereunder, or the extent of the legislative or executive authority vested in the Federation by virtue of the Instrument of Accession of that State; or
 - (ii) arises under an agreement made under Part VI of this Act in relation to the administration in that state of a law of the Federal Legislature, or otherwise concerns some matter with respect to which the Federal Legislature has power to make laws for that State; or
 - (iii) arises under an agreement made after the establishment of the Federation, with the approval of His Majesty's Representative for the exercise of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States, between that State and the Federation or a Province, being an agreement which expressly provides that the said jurisdiction shall extend to such a dispute;
- (b) a dispute arising under any agreement which expressly provides that the said jurisdiction shall not extend to such a dispute.

(2) The Federal Court in the exercise its original jurisdiction shall not pronounce any judgment other than a declaratory judgment.

205. Appellate jurisdiction of Federal Court in appeals from High Courts in British India:—(1) An appeal shall lie to the Federal Court from any judgment, decree or final order of a High Court in British India, if the High Court certifies that the case involves a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of this Act or any Order in Council made thereunder, and it shall be the duty of every High Court in British India to consider in every case whether or not any such question is involved and of its own motion to give or to withhold a certificate accordingly.

(2) Where such a certificate is given, any party in the case may appeal to the Federal Court on the ground that any such question as aforesaid has been wrongly decided, and on any ground on which that party could have appealed without special leave to His Majesty in Council if no such certificate had been given, and, with the leave of the Federal Court, on any other ground, and no direct appeal shall lie to His Majesty in Council, either with or without special leave.

206. Power of Federal Legislature to enlarge appellate jurisdiction:—(1) The Federal Legislature may by Act provide that in such civil cases as may be specified in the Act an appeal shall lie to the Federal Court from a judgment, decree or final order of a High Court in British India without any such certificate as aforesaid, but no appeal shall lie under any such Act unless—

(a) the amount or value of the subject matter of the dispute in the court of first instance and still in dispute on appeal was and is not less than fifty thousand rupees or such other sum not less than fifteen thousand rupees as may be specified by the

Act, or the judgment, decree or final order involves directly or indirectly some claim or question respecting property of the like amount or value; or

(b) the Federal Court gives special leave to appeal.

(2) If the Federal Legislature makes such provision as is mentioned in the last preceding subsection, consequential provision may also be made by Act of the Federal Legislature for the abolition in whole or in part of direct appeals in civil cases from High Courts in British India to His Majesty in Council, either with or without special leave.

(3) A Bill or amendment for any of the purposes specified in this section shall not be introduced into, or moved in, either Chamber of the Federal Legislature without the previous sanction of the Governor-General in his discretion.

207. Appellate jurisdiction of Federal Court in appeals from High Courts in Federated States:— (1) An appeal shall lie to the Federal Court from a High Court in a Federated State on the ground that a question of law has been wrongly decided, being a question which concerns the interpretation of this Act or of an Order in Council made thereunder or the extent of the legislative or executive authority vested in the Federation by virtue of the Instrument of Accession of that State, or arises under an agreement made under Part VI of this Act in relation to the administration in that State of a law of the Federal Legislature.

(2) An appeal under this section shall be by way of special case to be stated for the opinion of the Federal Court by the High Court, and the Federal Court may require a case to be so stated, and may return any case so stated in order that further facts may be stated therein.

208. Appeals to His Majesty in Council :— An appeal may be brought to His Majesty in Council from a decision of the Federal Court—

- (a) from any judgment of the Federal Court given in the exercise of its original jurisdiction in any dispute which concerns the interpretation of this Act or of an Order in Council made thereunder, or the extent of the legislative or executive authority vested in the Federation by virtue of the Instrument of Accession of any State, or arises under an agreement made under Part VI of this Act in relation to the administration in any State of a law of the Federal Legislature, without leave; and
- (b) in any other case, by leave of the Federal Court or of His Majesty in Council.

209. Form of judgment on appeal.

210. Enforcement of decrees and orders of Federal Court and orders as to discovery, &c. :— (1) All authorities, civil and judicial, throughout the Federation, shall act in aid of the Federal Court.

(2) The Federal Court shall, as respects British India and the Federated States, have power to make any order for the purpose of securing the attendance of any person, the discovery or production of any documents, or the investigation or punishment of any contempt of court, which any High Court in British India has power to make as respects the territory within its jurisdiction, and any such orders, and any orders of the Federal Court as to the costs of and incidental to any proceedings therein, shall be enforceable by all courts and authorities in every part of British India or of any Federated State as if they were orders duly made by the highest court exercising civil or criminal jurisdiction, as the case may be, in that part.

(3) Nothing in this section—

- (a) shall apply to any such orders with respect to costs as is mentioned in subsection (2) of the last preceding section; or
- (b) shall, as regards a Federated State, apply in relation to any jurisdiction exercisable by the Federal Court by reason only of the making by the Federal Legislature of such provision as is mentioned in this chapter for enlarging the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Court.

211. Letters of request to Federated States:— Where in any case the Federal Court require a special case to be stated or re-stated by, or remit a case to, or order a stay of execution in a case from, a High Court in a Federated State, or require the aid of the civil or judicial authorities in a Federated State, the Federal Court shall cause letters of request in that behalf to be sent to the Ruler of the State, and the Ruler shall cause such communication to be made to the High Court or to any judicial or civil authority as the circumstances may require.

212. Law declared by Federal Court and Privy Council to be binding on all courts:— The law declared by the Federal Court and by any judgment of the Privy Council shall, so far as applicable, be recognised as binding on, and shall be followed by, all courts in British India, and so far as respects the application and interpretation of this Act or any Order in Council thereunder or any matter with respect to which the Federal Legislature has power to make laws in relation to the State, in any Federated State.

213. Power of Governor-General to consult Federal Court:— (1) If at any time it appears to the Governor-General that a question of law has arisen, or is likely to arise, which is of such a nature and of such public importance that it is expedient to obtain the opinion of the Federal Court upon it, he may in his discretion refer the question to that court for consideration, and the court may, after such hearing as they think fit, report to the Governor-General thereon.

(2) No report shall be made under this section save in accordance with an opinion delivered in open court with the concurrence of a majority of the judges present at the hearing of the case, but nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to prevent a judge who does not concur from delivering a dissenting opinion.

NOTES:—The preponderance of opinion among American lawyers is hostile to the idea of ‘advisory opinions’ on the ground that the giving of such opinions is not an appropriate judicial function.....But the advisory nature of jurisdiction is so good that attempts should be made to see that such a relief is possible to be availed of by the private suitors also and not by the Governor-General alone” (Mr. E. S. Sunda in “The Federal Court of India ”)

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935. (Contd.)

"It is proposed that the Federal Court shall have a jurisdiction similar to that possessed by the Privy Council under Section 4 of the Judicial Committee Act, 1833, which provides that His Majesty may refer to the committee for hearing and consideration any matters whatsoever as His Majesty may think fit, and that the committee shall thereupon hear and consider the same and shall advise His Majesty thereon." (J.P.C. Report.) "Procedure under this Judicial Committee Act 1833, differs from that under Section 213 in one respect—dissenting judgments are not delivered in the Privy Council. In allowing expression of dissent the Federal Court follows the practice of the International Court at the Hague." (Eddy and Lawton in "India's New Constitution. ")

214. Rules of court, &c.

215. Ancillary powers of Federal Court.

216. Expenses of Federal Court.

217. Construction of references to High Courts in States.

218. Savings.—Nothing in this chapter shall be construed as conferring, or empowering the Federal Legislature to confer, any right of appeal to the Federal Court in any case in which a High Court in British India is exercising jurisdiction on appeal from a court outside British India, or as affecting any right of appeal in any such case to His Majesty in Council with or without leave.

CHAPTER II.

The High Courts in British India.

219. Meaning of "High Court."—(1) The following courts shall in relation to British India be deemed to be High Courts for the purposes of this Act, that is to say, the

Provided that, if provision has been made before the commencement of Part III of this Act for the establishment of a High Court to replace any court or courts mentioned in this subsection, then as from the establishment of the new court this section shall have effect as if the new court were mentioned therein in lieu of the court or courts so replaced.

(2) The provisions of this chapter shall apply to every High Court in British India.

220. Constitution of High Courts:— (1) Every High Court shall be a court of record and shall consist of a chief justice and such other judges as His Majesty may from time to time deem it necessary to appoint:

Provided that—

- (a) a judge may by resignation under his hand addressed to the Governor resign his office;
- (b) a judge may be removed from his office by His Majesty by warrant under the Royal Sign Manual on the ground of misbehaviour or of infirmity of mind or body, if the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, on reference being made to them by His Majesty, report that the judge ought on any such ground to be removed.

(3) A person shall not be qualified for appointment as a judge of a High Court unless he—

- (a) is a barrister of England or Northern Ireland, of at least ten years' standing, or a member of the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland of at least ten years' standing; or
- (b) is a member of the Indian Civil Service of at least ten years' standing, who has for at least three years served as, or exercised the powers of, a district judge; or
- (c) has for at least five years held a judicial office in British India not inferior to that of a subordinate judge, or judge of a small cause court; or
- (d) has for at least ten years been a pleader of any High Court, or of two or more such Courts in succession:

Provided that a person shall not, unless he is, or when first appointed to judicial office was, a barrister, a member of the Faculty of Advocates or a pleader, be qualified for appointment as Chief Justice of any High Court constituted by letters patent until he has served for not less than three years as a judge of a High Court.

In computing for the purposes of this subsection the standing of a barrister or a member of the Faculty of Advocates, or the period during which a person has been a pleader, any period during which the person has held judicial office after he became a barrister, a member of the Faculty of Advocates, or a pleader, as the case may be, shall be included.

(4) Every person appointed to be a judge of a High Court shall, before he enters upon his office, make and subscribe before the Governor or some person appointed by him an oath according to the form set out in that behalf in the Fourth Schedule to this Act.

(1) His Majesty in Council may, if satisfied that an agreement in that behalf has been made between the Governments concerned, extend the jurisdiction of a High Court in any Province to any area in British India not forming part of that Province, and the High Court shall thereupon have the same jurisdiction in relation to that area as it has in relation to any other area in relation to which it exercises jurisdiction.

(2) Nothing in this section affects the provisions of any law or letters patent in force immediately before the commencement of Part III of this Act empowering any High Court to exercise jurisdiction in relation to more than one Province or in relation to a Province and an area not forming part of any Province.

(3) Where a High Court exercises jurisdiction in relation to any area or areas outside the Province in which it has its principal seat, nothing in this Act shall be construed—

- (a) as empowering the Legislature of the Province in which the Court has its principal seat to increase, restrict or abolish that jurisdiction; or
- (b) as preventing the Legislature having power to make laws in that behalf for any such area from passing such laws with respect to the jurisdiction of the court in relation to that area as it would be competent to pass if the principal seat of the court were in that area.

General Provisions.

240. Tenure of office of persons employed in civil capacities in India:—(1) Except as expressly provided by this Act, every person who is a member of a civil service of the Crown in India, or holds any civil post under the Crown in India, holds office during His Majesty's pleasure.

(2) No such person as aforesaid shall be dismissed from the service of His Majesty by any authority subordinate to that by which he was appointed.

(3) No such person as aforesaid shall be dismissed or reduced in rank until he has been given a reasonable opportunity of showing cause against the action proposed to be taken in regard to him :

Provided that this subsection shall not apply—

(a) where a person is dismissed or reduced in rank on the ground of conduct which has led to his conviction on a criminal charge; or,

(b) where an authority empowered to dismiss a person or reduce him in rank is satisfied that for some reason, to be recorded by that authority in writing, it is not reasonably practicable to give to that person an opportunity of showing cause.

(4) Notwithstanding that a person holding a civil post under the Crown in India holds office during His Majesty's pleasure, any contract under which a person, not being a member of a civil service of the Crown in India, is appointed under this Act to hold such a post may, if the Governor General, or, as the case may be, the Governor, deems it necessary in order to secure the services of a person having special qualifications, provide for the payment to him of compensation if before the expiration of an agreed period that post is abolished or he is, for reasons not connected with any misconduct on his part, required to vacate that post.

Provided that it shall not be necessary to make rules regulating the conditions of service of persons employed temporarily on the terms that their employment may be terminated on one month's notice or less, and nothing in this sub-section shall be construed as requiring the rules regulating the conditions of service of any class of persons to extend to any matter which appears to the rule-making authority to be a matter not suitable for regulation by rule in the case of that class.

(3) The said rules shall be so framed as to secure—

- (a) that, in the case of a person who before the commencement of Part III of this Act was serving His Majesty in a civil capacity in India, no order which alters or interprets to his disadvantage any rule by which his conditions of service are regulated shall be made except by an authority which would have been competent to make such an order on the eighth day of

(b) that every such person as aforesaid shall have the same rights of appeal to the same authorities from any order which—

as he would have had immediately before the commencement of Part III of this Act, or such similar rights of appeal to such corresponding authorities as may be directed by the Secretary of State or by some person empowered by the Secretary of State to give directions in that respect;

(c) that every other person serving His Majesty in a civil capacity in India shall have at least one appeal against any such order as aforesaid, not being an order of the Governor-General or a Governor.

NOTES :— The J. P. C. Report wrote, " A strict rule ought in our opinion to be adopted and enforced, though it would be clearly out of place in the Constitution Act itself, that recommendations from, or attempts to exercise influence by members of the Legislature in the appointment or promotion of any member of the Subordinate Judiciary are sufficient in themselves to disqualify a candidate, whatever his personal merits may be. We would admit no exception to this rule, which has for many years past been accepted without question in the Civil Service of the United Kingdom.

" A recommendation by the Minister for the appointment of a member of the Subordinate Judicial Service should only be made with the approval of the Public Service Commission and of the High Court."

255. Subordinate civil judicial service.

NOTES:— " Candidates should be selected for appointment by the Public Service Commission, in consultation with the High Court, subject to any general regulations made by the Provincial Government as to the observance of communal proportions..... PART XII.

MISCELLANEOUS AND GENERAL.

The Crown and the Indian States.

285. Saving for rights and obligations of the Crown in its relations with Indian States. Subject in the case of a Federated State to the provisions of the Instrument of Accession of that State, nothing in this Act affects the rights and obligations of the Crown in relation to any Indian State.

There are altogether forty States which have got treaties with the British. They are:—Alwar (1803); Bahawalpur (1838); Banswara (1818); Baroda (1805); Bharatpur (1805); Bhopal (1818); Bikanir (1818); Bundi (1818); Cochin (1809); Cutch (1819); Datia (1818); Dewas (Senior, & Junior) (1818); Dhar (1819); Dhou (1806); Gwalior (1804) and (1844); Hyderabad (1800) and (1853) Indore (1818); Jaipur (1818); Jaisalmer (1818); Jammu and Kashmir (1846); Jhalawar (1838); Jodhpur (1818); Kalat (1876); Karauli (1817); Khairpur (1838); Kishengarh (1818); Kolhapur (1812); Kotah (1817); Mysore (1881) and (1913); Orehha (1812); Partapgarh (1818); Rampur (1794); Rewa (1812); Samthar (1817); Sawantwari (1819); Sikkim (1814); Sirohi (I823); Travancore (1805); Tonk (1817); Udaipur (1818).

—(Prof. G. N. Singh: Indian States and British India.)

The Princes' Note contained the following observations:—
 “If the Rulers delegated certain portions of their sovereignty and internal jurisdiction to the Crown, they also expected that the Crown would accept liability to preserve and safeguard the whole of their sovereignty and internal autonomy not specifically thereby safe-guarded from any encroachment in the future. Amendments and alterations made with mutual consent and the free volition of both parties no doubt may supplant and take the place of old treaties. As novatio, the altered treaties are equally binding; but there ought to be no room for any continuous erosive action hereafter from usage, sufferance, acquisitio, political practice or ultimate powers of paramountcy so as to undermine the essence and the substance from below of these sacred treaties.

In conclusion it should be well to remember that the Princes had originally accepted the invitation to federate out of their anxious desire to be of service to the Empire.”

Sir Samuel Hoaro wrote:—“His Majesty's Government understand that the States feel apprehensive as regards the effect of their acceptance of the legislative and executive authority of the Federation in certain matters upon their relations with the Crown in other matters; and these apprehensions have no doubt also influenced Their Highnesses in the claim made in paragraph 9 of their Note that the Bill should reproduce in some form the provisions of Section 132 of the existing Government of India Act, which provides that all treaties made by the East India Company are, so far as they are in force at the commencement of the Act, binding on His Majesty.

This Section appeared first in the Government of India Act 1858, where it was obviously required by reason of the transfer which that Act effected of all rights and obligations of the East India Company to the Crown; and it was only re-enacted in the Government of India Act 1915, because that Act consolidated existing Statutes relating to India, and not because it was thought necessary to re-affirm obligations which the Crown had already assumed. The Crown's engagements towards the Indian Rulers need no re-affirmation by Parliament. But His Majesty's Government are prepared, if the Rulers so desire, to consider the insertion in this Bill of a provision to the effect that nothing in the Act will affect the engagements of the Crown outside the Federal sphere. If, in addition, some States desire a re-affirmation of the engagements of the Crown towards them so far as they relate to matters outside the Federal sphere, this would, as on other occasions, more appropriately take some extra-statutory form, and His Majesty's Government will consider how best a satisfactory assurance would perhaps most conveniently be given at the time when the execution of Instruments of Accession is accepted by His Majesty".

On the question of Paramountcy the Princes' Note contained the following:—

"The Chamber of Princes have from the very outset urged a satisfactory settlement of the claims of paramountcy to be a condition precedent to the accession of the States to any Federation. Among the essential conditions they had laid down from time to time, the one treating with a definition of paramountcy had been made a sine qua non to any Federation. They have consistently asked that "the sovereignty and autonomy of their States shall be fully respected and guaranteed, and there shall be no interference, direct or indirect, with the internal autonomy of their States." It is regretted that no effective steps have been taken, so far, to reach a settlement of the question of paramountcy, which has justly been considered by the princes to be one of vital importance. It is true that, as stated by the Secretary of State in his recent pronouncement, the Princes had never desired the inclusion of the question of paramountcy in the Constitution Act, but this does not mean that they have not repeatedly emphasized that its settlement is a condition precedent to their entry into Federation".

His Highness the Maharaja of Patiala's resolution adopted by the Chamber of Princes was as follows:—

"The Chamber wishes to emphasize that the inauguration and success of the Federation will depend entirely on the good-will and co-operation of all parties concerned and upon the clear recognition of the Sovereignty of the States and their rights under treaties and engagements"

On the question of sovereignty Mr. Panikkar wrote:—
 "The juristic theory of an absolute, undivided final authority, has had no historical experience to back it..... There can be no doubt that within the limits set by the agreements that define their relation with the British Government, Indian rulers are sovereigns by every criterion of political science".

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935. (Contd.)

Sir T. B. Sapru stated in the closing sessions of the Federal Structure Committee:—"The question of paramountcy in relation to the Crown is one thing and in relation to the Federation is quite a different thing. There can be no such thing under a Federal Constitution as one paramount unit of the Federation exercising paramountcy over another unit of the Federation. Their basis of Federation is equality".

Under Transitory Provisions the J. P. C. Report said:—"From the date of the inauguration of Provincial Autonomy the Governor-General should become solely responsible for the control of the relations between the Crown and the States".

286. Use of His Majesty's forces in connection with discharge of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States:—(1) If His Majesty's Representative for the exercise of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States requests the assistance of armed forces for the due discharge of those functions, it shall be the duty of the Governor-General in the exercise of the executive authority of the Federation to cause the necessary forces to be employed accordingly, but the net additional expense, if any, incurred in connection with those forces by reason of that employment shall be deemed to be expenses of His Majesty incurred in discharging the said functions of the Crown.

(2) In discharging his functions under this section the Governor-General shall act in his discretion.

NOTES:—Sir Samuel Hoare wrote:—"The State Ministers ask firstly for specific provision that "the authority of the Federation should extend to placing at the service of the Crown the means of implementing the Crown's obligations to the States," in other words that military forces should be available for the protection of the States. It is believed that the provisions of the Bill are adequate for this purpose, but the matter is being re-examined to make sure that there is no room for doubt upon the point, to which His Majesty's Government attach much importance.'

Power of His Majesty to make provision with respect to franchises and elections:—In so far as provision with respect to the matters hereinafter mentioned is not made by this Act, His Majesty in Council may from time to time make provision with respect to those matters or any of them, that is to say—

- (a) the delimitation of territorial constituencies for the purpose of elections under this Act;
- (b) the qualifications entitling persons to vote in territorial or other constituencies at such elections, and the preparation of electoral rolls;

- (g) corrupt practices and other offences at or in connection with such elections;
- (h) the decision of doubts and disputes arising out of, or in connection with, such elections;
- (i) matters ancillary to such matter as aforesaid.

NOTES:—“The Provincial electorate under the existing franchise numbers approximately seven million men and women.....The Statutory Commission were of opinion that the existing franchise was too limited, and recommended that it should be extended so as to enfranchise about ten per cent of the population and they laid special emphasis upon “the need of increasing the ratio of women to men voters.” The Round Table Conference suggested about 25% to be enfranchised. “It is estimated that the proposals in the White Paper (partly based on the Franchise Committee Report) would, if adopted, create a male electorate of between 28 millions and 29 millions and a female electorate of over 6 millions as compared to the present figures of 7 millions and 3,15,000 respectively.” (J.-P. C. R.)

Provisions as to certain legal matters.

Federated State which His Majesty in signifying his acceptance of the Instrument of Accession of that State may declare to be an area theretofore administered by or on behalf of His Majesty to which it is expedient that the provisions of this subsection should apply, and references in this Act to a Federated State shall not be construed as including references to any such area :

Provided that—

- (a) a declaration shall not be made under this subsection with respect to any area unless, before the execution by the Ruler of the Instrument of Accession, notice has been given to him of His Majesty's intention to make that declaration;
- (b) if His Majesty with the assent of the Ruler of the State relinquishes his powers and jurisdiction in relation to any such area or any part of any such area, the foregoing provisions of this subsection shall cease to apply to that area or part, and the executive authority of the Federation and the legislative power of the Federal Legislature shall extend thereto in respect of such matters and subject to such limitations as may be specified in a supplementary Instrument of Accession for the State.

Nothing in this subsection applies to any area if it appears to His Majesty that jurisdiction to administer the area was granted to him solely in connection with a railway.

(2) Subject as aforesaid and to the following provisions of this section, if, after the accession of a State becomes effective, power or jurisdiction therein with respect to any matter is, by virtue of the Instrument of Accession of the State, exercisable, either generally or subject to limits, by the Federation, the Federal Legislature, the Federal Court, the Federal Railway Authority, or a Court or an authority exercising the power or jurisdiction by virtue of an Act of the Federal Legislature, or is, by virtue of an agreement made under Part VI of this Act in relation to the administration of a law of the Federal Legislature, exercisable, either generally or subject to limits, by the Ruler or his officers, then any power or jurisdiction formerly exercisable on His Majesty's behalf in that State, whether by virtue of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, or otherwise, shall not be exercisable in that State with respect to that matter or, as the case may be, with respect to that matter within those limits.

(3) So much of any law as by virtue of any power exercised by or on behalf of His Majesty to make laws in a State is in force in a Federated State immediately before the accession of the State becomes effective and might by virtue of the Instrument of Accession of the State be re-enacted for that State by the Federal Legislature, shall continue in force and be deemed for the purposes of this Act to be a Federal law so re-enacted :

Provided that any such law may be repealed or amended by Act of the Federal Legislature and unless continued in force by such an Act shall cease to have effect on the expiration of five years from the date when the accession of the State becomes effective.

(4) Subject as aforesaid, the powers and jurisdiction exercisable by or on behalf of His Majesty before the commencement of Part III of this Act in Indian States shall continue to be exercisable, and any Order in Council with respect to the said powers or jurisdiction made under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, or otherwise, and all delegations, rules and orders made under any such Order, shall continue to be of full force and effect until the Order is amended or revoked by a subsequent Order.

Provided that nothing in this subsection shall be construed as prohibiting His Majesty from relinquishing any power or jurisdiction in any Indian State.

(5) An Order in Council made by virtue and in exercise of the powers by the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, or otherwise in His Majesty vested, empowering any person to make rules and orders in respect of courts or administrative authorities acting for any territory shall not be invalid by reason only that it confers, or delegates powers to confer, on courts or administrative authorities power to sit or act outside the territory in respect of which they have jurisdiction or functions, or that it confers, or delegates power to confer, appellate jurisdiction or functions on courts or administrative authorities sitting or acting outside the territory.

(6) In the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, the expression "a British court in a foreign country" shall, in relation to any part of India outside British India, include any person duly exercising on behalf of His Majesty any jurisdiction, civil or criminal, original or appellate, whether by virtue of an Order in Council or not, and for the purposes of section nine of that Act the Federal Court shall, as respects appellate jurisdiction in cases tried by a British Court in a Federated State, be deemed to be a Court held in a British Possession or under the authority of His Majesty.

(7) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as limiting any right of His Majesty to determine by what courts British subjects and subjects of foreign countries shall be tried in respect of offences committed in Indian States.

(8) Nothing in this section affects the provisions of this Act with respect to Berar.

NOTES:—Referring to foreign jurisdiction in an Assigned Tract, Lord Reading said in the course of a speech delivered during the Viceregal visit to Bangalore in 1923:—

“This tract, you are aware, is not British India, but is a portion of an Indian State assigned to the Government of India to be held and administered as a Military Station. The permanent status of the tract is that of an integral part of Mysore State, though for a special reason, the administration of this portion of State territory is carried on by a British Resident responsible to the Government of India.”

GENERAL ADMINISTRATION.

In 1763 the Diwani was conferred on the Company by the Moghul Emperor, and in 1772 the Company created a Board of Revenue for Bengal. Up to 1773 the three Presidencies of Madras, Bombay, and Bengal were separate and independent. But in that year a sort of political and administrative unification of India was brought about by making Madras and Bombay subordinate to the Governor-General at Fort William. The Governor-General in Council consisting of four members was empowered to make laws, but these were not valid until they were duly registered in the Supreme Court. In 1784 the Governor-General's Council came to have three members including the Commander-in-Chief, and the Governor's Council too had the same number.

In 1786 the Governor-General was given power to overrule his council in case of disagreement; and the offices of the Commander-in-Chief and the Governor-General were combined. Another provision that all the members of the Council should have the qualification of having served in India for twelve years was also brought into force. It was enacted in 1793 that the Governor General should not leave India during his term of office (this rule was changed in 1925). In 1833 the Governor-General of Fort William became the Governor-General of India. The Act provided for the division of the overgrown Presidency of Bengal into Provinces, viz. Fort William and Agra, but this did not come into operation. By the Act of 1833 a "Law Commission" was appointed consisting of Lord Macaulay, Cameron (Barrister), Macleod, I.C.S., and Sir William Anderson, I.C.S. The same Act enabled natural-born subjects of the Crown to acquire and hold lands in India. The year 1853 saw the appointment of a committee in England to examine the report of the Law Commission. Among its members were Lord Romilly, Sir J. Jervis, and Lord Sherbroke. In 1854 the Province of Bengal began to have a Lieutenant-Governor. A Lieutenant-Governor was sanctioned for the Punjab in 1859. The Act of 1854 also empowered the creation of Chief Commissionerships wherever necessary; and under the power so conferred, Burma and C. P., and much later Delhi in 1912, came to have Chief Commissioners. In 1861 a fifth member for the Governor-General's Executive Council was appointed. Provincial Legislatures consisting of not less than 4 and not more than 8 non-officials were to be set up. The Lieutenant-Governor was to be a member of the Indian Legislative Council if its meeting was held within his Province. An Act of 1870 authorised the Governor-General to pass regulations for the Provinces without a Legislative Council. The formal dissolution of the East India Company took place in 1870.

In 1874 a sixth member for the Governor-General's Executive Council was also appointed. In 1876 was passed the Royal Titles Act conferring on the Queen of England the title of Empress of India.

In 1886 a Lieutenant-Governor was appointed for the N. W. Province and in 1897 for the Punjab. Among the Provinces, "Madras and Bombay enjoyed the qualified privilege of non-subordination to the Governor-General." In 1904 the sixth Membership of the Governor-General's Council, which was abolished in the interval, was reintroduced. By the Minto-Morley reforms the number of members of the Executive Council was raised from two to four in the Provinces.

B.CONTROL FROM ENGLAND]

The Court of Proprietors for the East India Company provided in the year 1773 a system of Directorial Control in matters pertaining to India, by which there were to be twenty-four Directors elected for a term of four years, but one fourth of them were to retire every year. A Board of Control was instituted in 1784 consisting of six Commissioners who were to be Privy Councillors, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Secretary of State. This Board, so constituted, was to have control over the Board of Directors. In 1793 it was decided that the payment to the members of the Board of Control should be from Indian revenues. It was also ruled that two junior members of the Board need not be Privy Councillors. The number of Directors was reduced from twenty-four to eighteen in the year 1853, and it was also provided at the same time that six of them should be appointed by the Crown. The year 1858 saw the important step of the formation of the India Council. It was to consist of 15 members in all, seven of whom were to be appointed by the Directors and eight others by the King. Half the number were to have the following minimum qualification for being a member, viz. they should have served India for ten years and also should not have left India more than ten years previous to their appointment. They were to get a salary of £ 1200, this being chargeable to Indian Revenues. Vacancies in the India Council were to be filled in such a manner that nine members at least were to have the qualification mentioned above.

In 1869 the Secretary of State for India got the power of filling vacancies in the India Council, and the term for each member was fixed as 10 years. In 1889 the number of members was reduced to ten. A provision of 1907, however, ruled that the number should be not less than ten and not more than fourteen; and also the term of office and salary were fixed as five years and £ 1000 respectively.

The Crewe Committee was also appointed at the time of the Reform Proposals of 1919. It advocated the abolition of the India Council and the creation of simple advisory councils. But this was vetoed by the Joint Parliamentary Committee under the Presidency of Lord Shelburne.

According to the Government of India Act of 1919 there were to be not less than 8 members in the India Council, nor more than 12 members, and at least half of them were to have served or resided in India for at least ten years and were not to have left India more than five years previously. These provisions were meant to secure men with fresh experience of Indian life. They were to hold office for five years, and could, in special circumstances, be continued for another five years. They could not be Members of Parliament. Their salary was to be £ 1200, while those who were domiciled in India got £ 1800. A contribution of £ 136,500 per annum was paid by the British treasury as the estimated cost of the Political functions of the Secretary of State for India. Formerly, the Welby Commission Report had fixed £ 40,000 under the same head.

C.

THE GROWTH OF THE JUDICIARY.

In the year 1726 Mayor's Courts were established at Madras, Bombay, and Calcutta. These courts had jurisdiction in civil and ecclesiastical cases arising from relations between Europeans in India. They could have jurisdiction in cases concerning Indians only if they consented to adjudication. In 1765 the Diwani of Bengal was granted to the Company. Under the Diwani civil justice was administered in Mayor's Court and the Court of Requests, and criminal justice was administered in Petty and Quarter Sessions in Presidency towns. The year 1773 was important in that a Supreme Court was established in that year at Fort William in Bengal. It was to consist of a Chief Judge and three other judges all of whom were to be Barristers of not less than five years' standing. The court exercised jurisdiction over the Provinces of Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa in all matters civil, criminal, ecclesiastical, and administrative. It was empowered to exercise jurisdiction over the inhabitants of the country in contracts over Rs. 500 in case the people agreed to refer the dispute to the Supreme Court. Appeal from the Supreme Court lay to the King in Council. The Governor-General and members of the Council were made Justices of the Peace.

An Act of 1781 exempted the Governor-General and Council of Bengal from the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in matters done by them in their public capacity. The Governor-General in Council got powers to create Provincial Courts of Justice and to frame 'Regulations' for them without reference to the Supreme Court. Lord Cornwallis introduced various judicial reforms and the regularisation of three types of Courts including the Sadar Nizamat Adalat and Sadar Diwani Adalat. In 1797 a Recorder's Courts was established at Madras. In 1800 a Supreme Court was established at Madras and in 1823 Bombay got a Supreme Court.

By the Indian High Courts Act of 1861, High Courts were established at Madras, Calcutta, and Bombay which amalgamated the jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts and the Sadar Adalats. The Indian High Courts Act, 1911, empowered the Crown to establish new High Courts. The maximum number of judges in a High Court was raised to twenty. The Governor-General was given power to appoint temporary judges for a term not exceeding two years. The Government of India Act of 1915 and later the Act of 1919 re-embodied these provisions. Of the High Court judges one-third shall be Barristers and one-third must be members of the Civil Service. A pleader of a High Court with not less than ten years' standing at the Bar was also eligible for a High Court Judgeship.

THE PUBLIC SERVICES.

The Act of 1773 provided that no presents or bribes should be accepted and no private trade should be carried on by the public servants. All those violating this rule were liable to be tried by the King's Bench. The following scales of pay were also fixed in 1773, viz:—

Governor-General.....	£ 25,000 per annum
Members.....	£ 10,000 ,,
Chief Justice.....	£ 8,000 ,,
Judges.....	£ 6,000 ,,

The enactments of 1784 provided that the public servants violating the laws against bribery, private trade, etc. should be tried by three judges, four peers, and six members of Parliament. Indians were given little encouragement by Lord Cornwallis who was the Governor-General then. From 1813 onwards organised military and civil training was given. The Haileybury College and the Adiscombe Military Academy were established and maintained for this purpose. Encouragement to Indians was given only from 1818, and from 1833 it was decided that fitness was to be the criterion of eligibility, and natives were not disabled from holding office.

An Act of 1853 took away the patronage from the Court of Directors. In 1854 Macaulay drew up the Civil Service Open Competition scheme. By the Civil Service Act of 1861 all appointments were to be made to the Indian Civil Service by merit. The Act also gave schedules of the appointments reserved for the Indian Service.

It was provided in 1869 that Indians too were eligible for the Indian Civil Service Examination, but the minimum age of nineteen years was too low in the case of Indians. Further no provision was made for simultaneous examinations in India and England. It was decided in 1870 that Statutory Civilians were to be appointed from that date and the scale of salaries was also fixed. Indians had not made serious inroad into the highest rank of civil service. "In 1878 even the feat of competing successfully in the I. C. S. examination in England was practically closed by an order of Lord Salisbury which reduced the minimum age of candidates from 21 to 19. In 1870 there were 7 candidates, but in 1880 only two."

Lord Lytton had found that since 1870, when an Act of Parliament had been passed enabling the Government of India to appoint Indians to posts hitherto reserved for the Covenanted Civil Service, no serious attempt had been made for putting the Act into operation. Accordingly in 1879 he produced his plans for a Statutory Civil Service under which a fifth of the recruitment for the Civil Service could be made from Indians selected by Provincial Governments, and a proportion of posts reserved for the Covenanted Civil Service were to be held by men of Indian birth. Lord Ripon continued this policy, but partly from lack of enthusiasm in Provincial government and partly because the wealthier Zamindars were not induced to enter public service, the Statutory Civil Service was not a success. It was staffed almost entirely by Indians promoted from Uncovenanted Service and was abolished in 1891.

In 1886 Lord Dufferin appointed the Aitchison Commission to produce a scheme for doing justice to the claims of Indians to higher and more extensive employment. The effect of the Commission was to establish the Statutory Civil Service. The Commission recommended to the Public Service Commission a vested right to certain posts for Indians. But this was resisted. In 1889 the maximum age was fixed as twenty three years.

In 1893 Parliament passed a resolution in favour of simultaneous examinations in India and England. The local Governments objected to simultaneous examinations. In 1912 a Commission was appointed to investigate into the conditions of the Public Service in India under the Chairmanship of Lord Islington. It consisted of Mr. Gokhale, Sir Abdul Rahim, Lord Ronaldshay (now the Marquess of Zetland), Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and others as members. The Report was published after India had played a landable part in the prosecution of the War, and so the report was not considered as satisfying the higher ambitions of India.

Since 1924 the Lee Commission gave certain special privileges to the All-India Services on the Reserved side and delegated to the Local governments power to reorganise their own Provincial subjects in other departments. The Government of India Act 1919, provided for the Public Service Commission. The Joint Parliamentary Committee Report says: "The Public Service Commissions at present existing in India are the Central Public Service Commission established under the Government of India Act, and the Madras Service Commission, established under an Act of the Madras Legislature in 1929. The legislation necessary for setting up a Public Service Commission in the Punjab has been passed, but the establishment of the Commission awaits an improvement in the finances of the Province. The White Paper proposes the continuance of the Central Public Service Commission as a Federal organ, and the setting up in each Province of a Provincial Public Service Commission. The functions proposed for all these Commissions are advisory in character and similar to those at present performed by the Central and Madras Commissions. We regard it as essential that each Provincial Government should be able to avail itself of the advice of a Public Service Commission."

THE ARMY.

"In 1726 the Company was authorised as in previous charters to appoint general and military officers to exercise the inhabitants in arms and to exercise Martial Law in time of war." (Ilbert).

"In 1744 war broke out between England and France. In 1746 the hostilities extended to India. These events led to the establishment of the Company's Indian Army".

An Act of 1754 laid down for the Indian forces of the Company provisions corresponding to those embodied in the Annual English Mutiny Acts and also provisions for the holding of Courts Martial.

In 1765 under Double Government the Company assumed full power of maintaining and disbanding its military force.

An Act of 1799 gave the Company further powers for raising European troops and maintaining discipline among them. Authority was given to the Company to train and exercise recruits.

In 1813 it was declared that the Government of India might make laws, regulations, and articles of war for Indian troops. That Act also limited the number of troops to 20,000. A provision in 1820 enabled the Company to raise and maintain a corps of Volunteer Infantry. An Act of 1828 applied the East Indian Mutiny Act to the Bombay Marine, and some provisions in 1833 dealt with discipline in the army. The 1840 Act consolidated the Indian Mutiny Act and empowered the Governor-General to make Regulations for the Indian Navy. "The Mutiny led to the introduction of an entirely new principle, that of balancing the communities inside the army." And from 1858, the patronage of military cadetship was divided between the Secretary of State and the India Council. In the same year the Company's troops were transferred to the Crown. Before the Mutiny each Presidency had its separate army. This arrangement was continued after the Mutiny also. In the meanwhile, the strength of the European army was increased. In 1860 the existence of European troops as a separate force was terminated and merged in the army of the Crown. The year 1861 saw the constitution of a regular army for British India. The Naval forces of the Company came to an end in the year 1863, and in 1884 the Marine Service Act enabled the Governor-General in Council to legislate for maintaining discipline in the Royal Indian Marine. The posts of Commanders-in-Chief in Madras and Bombay were abolished in 1893 in which year the Army was unified. Many reforms were introduced in the Army in 1905 by Lord Kitchener. The year 1917 is important in that the bar regarding Indians receiving King's Commissions in the Army was removed. But the Army expenditure was long engaging the attention of several Indian Politicians. As Dr. Berriedale Keith says, "Unfortunately the politicians were presented with a genuine grievance in the report issued in October 1920 of the Esher Committee, for that document unquestionably could be understood to advocate treating the Indian Army as maintained as part of the scheme of imperial defence, a conception not adopted in pre-war days. It was, of course, in the light of war experience easy to feel that the earlier policy had, from a military standpoint, been mistaken, but it was not realised that the vital political changes rendered it impossible to decide army policy in India without regard to Indian national feeling."

In 1923 the Eight Units Scheme was adopted for Indianisation. Under it Indian officers holding King's Commission were to be posted in the Eight Units. The Indian Sandhurst Committee under Sir A. Skeene recommended the establishment of an Indian counter-part to Sandhurst. In 1932 the scheme of Indianisation of eight more units was adopted. The Government opened the Indian Military Academy in Dehra Dun in the year 1933.

EXTRACTS FROM PROCLAMATIONS, SPEECHES AND WRITINGS &c. ON INDIAN POLICY.

1. The Court of Directors' Despatch of 1834 to the Governor-General:—

* * * "We deem it of great moment, therefore, that you should by positive rules provide that every project or proposal of a law shall travel through a defined succession of stages in Council before it is finally adopted; that at each stage it shall be amply discussed, and that the intervals of discussion shall be such as to allow to each Member of Council adequate opportunity of reflection and enquiry."

2. Viscount Palmerston's Speech on February 12, 1858:--

"And it is not on the ground of any delinquency on the part of the Company, but on the ground of the inconvenience and injurious character of the existing arrangements, that I propose this measure to the House. It is perhaps one of the most extraordinary facts in the history of mankind that these British Islands should have acquired such an extensive dominion in a remote part of the globe as that which we exercise over the continent of India. It is indeed remarkable that those regions, in which science and art may be said to have first dawned upon mankind, should now be subject to the rule of a people inhabiting islands, which at a time when these eastern regions enjoyed as high a civilization and as great prosperity as that age could offer, were in a state of utter barbarism.

The existing state of things grew up from a very small beginning. The original settlers began with a factory, the factory grew into a fort, the fort expanded to a district, and the district to a province, and then came collisions with less civilized neighbours, injuries to be resented, attacks to be repelled, and conflicts which always ended in victory and extension of territory. So, gradually, from one transaction to another, grew up that state of things in which the East India Company found itself invested with vast commercial privileges."

3. Queen Victoria's Letter to the Earl of Derby, 15th August, 1858:--

The Queen has asked Lord Malmesbury to explain in detail to Lord Derby her objection to the draft of Proclamation for India. The Queen would be glad if Lord Derby would write it himself in his excellent language, bearing in mind that it is a female Sovereign who speaks to more than 100,000,000 of Eastern people on assuming the direct Government over them after a bloody civil war, giving them pledges which her future reign is to redeem, and explaining the principles of her Government. Such a document should breathe feelings of generosity, benevolence, and religious feeling, pointing out the privileges which the Indians will receive in being placed on an equality with the Subjects of the British Crown and the prosperity following in the train of civilisation.

4. Queen Victoria's Proclamation, November 1, 1858.

When, by the Blessing of Providence, internal Tranquillity shall be restored, it is Our earnest desire to stimulate the peaceful Industry of India, to promote Works of Public Utility and Improvement, and to administer its Government for the benefit of all Our Subjects resident therein. In their Prosperity will be Our strength; in their Contentment Our Security; and in their Gratitude Our best Reward. And may the God of all Power grant to Us, and to those in authority under Us, Strength to carry out these Our Wishes for the good of Our People.

5. King-Emperor Edward VII's Proclamation, November 2, 1908.

The welfare of India was one of the objects dearest to the heart of Queen Victoria. By Me, ever since My visit in 1875, the interests of India, its Princes and peoples, have been watched with an affectionate solicitude that time cannot weaken. My dear Son, the Prince of Wales, and the Princess of Wales, returned from their sojourn among you with warm attachment to your land, and true and earnest interest in its well-being and content. These sincere feelings of active sympathy and hope for India on the part of My Royal House and Line, only represent, and they do most truly represent, the deep and united will and purpose of the people of their Kingdom.

6. King-Emperor George V's Announcement at the Coronation Durbar, December 12, 1911.

I finally rejoice to have this opportunity of renewing in My Own person those assurances which have been given you by My predecessors of the maintenance of your rights and privileges and of My earnest concern for your welfare, peace and contentment.

7. Lord Hardinge's Speech on February 26, 1916, on investing H. H. the Maharajah of Jodhpur with ruling powers.

"Our policy towards the Ruling Princes, at least during the recent years, has been one of sympathy and trust; of sympathy with their aims and sentiments and their noble traditions; of trust in their fervent loyalty to the Person of the King-Emperor and to the Power whose protection they enjoy. We have recognized that if a state is to be ruled justly and well and to be the source of real help to the British Empire, it is only through the Ruler himself, supported by his Sirdars and people, that these results can be obtained. Irksome restrictions on the exercise of Sovereign powers are apt to chafe and irritate a proud and sensitive spirit with results disastrous, not only to the Ruler and his people, but also to the Empire at large. We have, therefore, made it our aim to cultivate close and friendly relations with the Ruling Princes, to show by every means that we trust them and look on them as helpers and colleagues in the great task of Imperial rule, and so to foster in them a spirit of responsibility and pride in their work which no external supervision can produce."

8. H. H. the Maharaja of Bikaner's Speech at the Ruling Princes' Conference on November 10, 1917.

" It can never be too often emphasised that we represent about one-third of the Indian Empire's population, and that no scheme for the progress of India be regarded as satisfactory or complete, which does not take into consideration questions relating to these important territories outside British India. We feel that we too must keep a definite goal in front of us, and whilst it is essential that our rights and privileges, our position as allies and friends, guaranteed to us by solemn treaties and engagements with the British Government remain unaltered, our States cannot afford to lag behind in the general advance which India's association with Great Britain alone has rendered possible.

It is for these reasons that we are now all the more anxious to see the early establishment of a Constitutional Chamber which may safeguard the interests and rights of ourselves and of our States."

9. Montagu-Chelmsford Report on Indian Constitutional Reforms.

"On the other hand, it seems to us that, when a Council of Princes has been established and when a Council of State and a Privy Council have been created, the machinery will exist for bringing the senatorial institutions of British India into closer relations when necessary with the Rulers of the Native States. Matters affecting the Native States generally, or the Native States and British India in common, or the Empire, might, as we have seen, be referred to the Council of Princes. It would thus be possible for the Viceroy when he thought fit, to arrange for joint deliberation and discussion between the Council of State and the Council of Princes, or between representatives of each body. He might also invite members of the Council of Princes to serve on committees of the Privy Council,"

10. Preamble to the Government of India Act, 1919.

"Whereas it is the declared policy of Parliament to provide for the increasing association of Indians in every branch of Indian Administration, and for the gradual development of self-governing institutions, with a view to the progressive realisation of responsible Government in British India as an integral part of the Empire:

And whereas progress in giving effect to this policy can only be achieved by successive stages, and it is expedient that substantial steps in this direction should now be taken:

And whereas the time and manner of each advance can be determined only by Parliament, upon whom responsibility lies for the welfare and advancement of the Indian peoples:

And whereas the action of Parliament in such matters must be guided by the co-operation received from those on whom new opportunities of service will be conferred, and by the extent to which it is found that confidence can be reposed in their sense of responsibility:

And whereas concurrently with the gradual development of self-governing institutions in the Provinces of India, it is expedient to give to those Provinces in provincial matters the largest measure of independence of the Government of India which is compatible with the due discharge by the latter of its own Responsibilities. etc."

[Note:— This Preamble was not repealed by the Act of 1935.]

HSELECT OPINIONS ON CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTIONS.

- Thompson and Garret on the Simon Commission Report (in the Rise and Fulfilment of British Rule in India).

"The Simon Report—a document unhappy in form and in the circumstances of its appearance—like the White Paper of three years later, was written for British politicians, but chiefly read and discussed by Indians amongst whom it could only arouse hostility. The first volume reiterated, in somewhat sententious fashion, facts known to most people interested in India. But the emphasis was laid deliberately upon the diversity of the Indian people and their communal dissensions, while the account of recent events wholly disregard the depth and intensity of the nationalist feeling. The second volume surprised all Indians by being practically unanimous, although the three English parties were equally represented on the Commission. This confirmed the idea that all Englishmen, once they are in office, take the same view about India. The proposals of the Commission were of a conservative character and such innovations as they contained had already been discounted by moderate opinion both in England and India Dyarchy was condemned; but the Provincial autonomy, which was to take its place, was carefully safeguarded by the special powers of the Governor, and by the authority left to the Central Government. No effective change was suggested in the central executive until the States were prepared to come into a Federation, and the country was capable of defending herself, two provisos which were taken as clearly deferring the transfer of authority for a generation or more. Indian nationalists could not be expected to consider such proposals seriously. Their status was left unchanged; and their future would have been dependent upon two factors neither of which was under their control. The Report suggested an endless series of disputes between Provincial legislatures and a British-controlled Central Government which in each Province would have its own representative in the person of the Governor and the members of the Imperial services.

2. Thompson and Garret on the "White Paper".

"The document was written for the British politician with the whole emphasis laid upon the safeguards against the dangers implicit in the new experiment, and without any attempt to win Indian support or interest. The safeguards were made as full and explicit as possible; on most disputed points the Government decided against the Indian delegates. There was no concession to Indian demand for some voice in military policy, while the future of the Civil Service was left to be reconsidered after five years. Finally the question of future time-table was to remain in the hands of the British Government. There was no suggestion that the safeguards would automatically come to an end. Inauguration of the Federation was made subject to a number of vague conditions which would be interpreted by the Government.....A document of this kind was not likely to rouse much enthusiasm in India, and the future of Federation of India, one of the greatest experiments the world has ever seen, seems likely to begin its life amidst the recriminations of its parents."

3. Dr. A. B. Keith on Dominion Status:—

"Any doubt which might have existed as to the sense of the declaration of 1917 disappeared when India was accorded a place in the League of Nations together with the Dominions. It was therefore only a formal recognition of an inevitable conclusion, when in 1929, with the permission of the British Government, Lord Irwin asserted that Dominion Status was the ultimate goal of British policy for India, an assurance reiterated by Lord Willingdon in 1933. Nor did the Secretary of State for India repudiate this reading of the situation when on November 22, 1933, he insisted that Dominion Status was not the immediate end of the Governmental proposals nor did it mark the next step in Indian reform.

"It is, however, clear that the assurance given by Lords Irwin and Willingdon are read as subject to the paramount principle asserted in 1917 that India must remain an integral part of the British Empire, and that Dominion Status must not be held to imply the right to secede. Such a right would be wholly incompatible with the position of the Indian States, whose accession is essential for the formation of the proposed federation, for, the Princes value in the highest degree their direct relations with the Crown. But apart from this point it is clear that, if Dominion Status were at once to be granted and enjoyed by the Federation, the Princes would be precluded from entering it."
